GOOD ROADS PUSH STARTS AT MEETING OF LEADERS

Much Enthusiasm At First Annual Session

WANG IN CHAIR

Neighboring Cities Anxious To Help Build Highways

The need of good roads in China as a vehicle for educational, commercial and social betterment of the people was emphasized at the first annual meeting of the Good Roads Movement yesterday which also marked the inauguration of the movement as a separate institution from the Pan-Pacific Union. The meeting was held at the Y.M.C.A.

Greetings were brought by representatives of the Military and Civil Governors of Kiangsu and Chekiang and the Defense Commissioner of Shanghai and Woosung. Representatives of Several Chambers of Commerce, Provincial Assemblies and Educational Associations attended.

Upon motion of Mr. W. W. Lockwood, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., Dr. C. T. Wang, chairman of the Good Roads Movement Committee of the Pan-Pacific Union, was unanimously elected chairman of the meeting.

Short congratulatory messages were delivered by Major-General Hsu Kuo-liang, Chief of the Woosung and the Shanghai Police, representing the Acting Tuchun of Kiangsu; Mr. Shiang Yung-fang, representing the Chekiang Tuchun; Mr. Ling Ta-tung, representing the Civil Governor of Chekiang and Judge S. K. Loh, representing the Defense Commissioner of Woosung and Shanghai.

TRACES WORK HERE

Judge Loh traced the good work that had been done by Dr. C. T. Wang during the last six months for the movement and urged that officials, merchants and students alike co-operate in making the movement a success, which would surely benefit education, commerce and industry and give personal convenience.

Mr. Sidney J. Powell, chairman of the survey committee, reported that tentative routes for the proposed roads to Nanking and Hangchow had been mapped out but nothing definite had yet been done. He pointed out the enthusiasm as shown in the Chinese cities by stating a number of protests had been received by the committee from cities where the proposed roads would not pass.

Dr. P. W. Kuo, president of the South-Eastern University and chairman of the Educational committee, stated that the function of the committee was to convince the people of the necessity of good roads and to enlighten the people on their importance. While the Government had been negligent in this work, he said, it could not be denied that the people themselves had been ignoring the question.

PLANS INVESTIGATED

The speaker reported that the work of his committee at present had been mostly on the investigation of the plans and experiences of the good road construction in foreign countries as well as in China. The committee proposes to organise the materials thus gathered and use them for lectures among the young people especially.

Dr. Kuo announced that it had been proposed to make good roads a subject of the coming annual oratorical contest of Kiangsu. This would give the students a chance to study up the question and take more interest in the movement. He further announced that a course in highway engineering is being planned by the South Eastern University. In conclusion, he invited all those interested in the movement to supply him with information which he might make use of in his lectures.

MAIL LEAVES TODAY

The dispatch of the steamer Montague has been postponed from yesterday until today, so that the closing of mails to America has been extended.

Register pouches close today at 3 p.m. and regular mail at 4 p.m.

The next mail after the departure of the Montague will leave on the Empress of Japan on May 21.

WENATCHEE DUE TOMORROW WITH JAPAN ON SUNDAY

Admiral Liner To Hold Public Tea And Reception Sunday Afternoon

The steamer Wenatchee of the Admiral Line is due to dock at the China Merchants Lower Wharf early tomorrow morning, and will sail for Manila and Hongkong Monday morning.

The Admiral Line will hold a tea-reception on the Wenatchee Sunday afternoon from three o'clock until six, to give the public an opportunity of inspecting the new type of ship. The Wenatchee, according to photographs and specifications received at the Admiral Line office, is arranged somewhat differently from the Pacific Mail steamer Golden State, its sister ship, which passed through this port last week on its first return trip to San Francisco. The heavy rain, which fell during the public reception on the Golden State, prevented many from visiting the ship. The new "535" type may be seen at the Wenatchee's reception Sunday.

The C.P.O.S. liner the Empress of Japan is now reported due off Woosung at 11 p.m. Sunday and will sail from Woosung for Hongkong at 7 p.m. Monday. Passengers inbound from the Empress will reach the Customs Jetty by the tender Alexandra at about 9:30 Sunday morning. The outgoing tender will leave the Customs Jetty at 4 p.m. Sunday. Mails and baggage will be loaded into a special lighter at Woosung on the boat's arrival and brought to Shanghai as soon as loaded.

Note To U. S. Defends Exclusive Contract To Mitsui

REFERS TO CABLE

Great Northern Case Parallel, Foreign Office Insists

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, May 3.—It will be remembered that the American Federal Wireless Telegraph Company's contract was signed on January 5 last, and that the Japanese Minister lodged a protest with the Chinese Government on January 19 on the ground that the American contract conflicted with the rights of Mitsui Company's agreement. On February 3 the Japanese Minister at Peking amplified this protest and urged the Chinese Government to give a speedy reply. On February 16 Mr. Obata communicated the text of the protest to the Chinese Government to the American Minister at Peking. On February 17 the American Charge d'Affaires asked the Japanese Government whether the protest made by the Japanese Minister at Peking had the approval of the Japanese Government and on February 27 in a further communication the American Charge set out America's views regarding the Mitsui contract. Up to this point the main facts have been published.

On April 9 the Japanese Government replied to the two communications from the United States. The Japanese Note began by referring to the query in the American Note of February 17 as to the approval of the Japanese Government and the character of the rights by which the protest was made and started in reply that the protest had the approval of the Japanese Government and pointed out that the Japanese Note of February 16 to the American Minister explained the grounds on which the protest was made.

JAPAN'S CONTENTIONS

The Japanese Note then went on to say that the main points of the American Note of Februray 27 and of a verbal communication made to the Japanese Foreign Office on March 4 were that whereas the Japanese demand for cancellation of the American contract was based on a latter dated March 5, 1918, supplementary to the contract between the Chinese Government and the Mitsui Company, containing a declaration that the Chinese Government should not erect or allow any party other than the Mitsui Company to erect a similar wireless telegraph station for communicating telegraphically with Europe or America, for a period of thirty years, the creation of such a monopoly by the Chinese Government was in contravention of the stipulations of the American-Chinese Treaty of 1858 and the Chinese Government, therefore, could not give any such exclusive right to the Mitsui Company. Furthermore, that in view of the invariable concurrence of the Japanese Government with the United States Government in various discussions relating to commercial and industrial opportunity in China, in deprecating

H'KONG BANK STONE LAID BEFORE NOTED GATHERING

British Minister Officiates In Impressive Ceremonial

OTHER SPEAKERS

Sir R. Stubbs, Mr. Edkins And Mr. Stephen Make Addresses

A distinguished gathering, an impressive and colorful ceremony—despite the inclemency of the weather—marked the laying yesterday noon of the cornerstone of the new Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation building, which at its completion will stand out as the finest and most imposing modern structure in the Far East.

Chief figure in the ceremony was Sir Beilby F. Alston, K.C.M.G., C. B., British Minister to China, who laid the stone in the presence of a throng of foreign and Chinese friends of the bank, who braved the wet to witness the affair. Others on the platform during the ceremony included Lady Alston, Sir Reginald E. Stubbs, K.C.M.G., Governor of Hongkong, Vice-Admiral Sir A. L. Duff, Commander-in-Chief of the British Squadron in the Far East, and Miss Duff; Sir Everard D. H. Fraser, British Consul-General, and Lady Fraser, Sir Henry Keswick, M. P.; Mr. G. T. M. Edkins, chairman of the board of directors of the bank; Mr. John Johnstone, of Jardine, Matheson and Co., a director; Mr. A. G. Stephen, chief manager of the bank; Mr. G. H. Stitt, Shanghai manager, and Mrs. Stitt; Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Borrett; Mr. H. H. Fox, C. M. G., Commercial Counsellor of Legation; Judge Skinner Turner; Mr. Brooke-Smith, chairman of the Municipal Council and Mrs. Brooke-Smith, General Ho Feng-lin, Defense Commissioner; Mr. Hsu Yuan, Commissioner for Foreign Affairs; Captain Woo—representing Admiral Lang—Messrs. Chu Pao-san, Chang Nieh-yuen and others.

COLORFUL SURROUNDINGS

The affair took place in a colorfully decorated hall, which was roofed with flags and draped and festooned with bunting and flowers. Pennants and flags flew from the roof and other vantage points. The British Minister arrived from the Consulate under escort of a troop of mounted Sikhs, while detachments of the S.V.C. paraded outside the grounds, at the corner of The Bund and Foochow Road, and the Municipal Band played "God Save the King."

Mr. Edkins delivered the introductory speech, which was followed by an address by Mr. A. G. Stephens, who was formerly manager here. Sir Beilby Alston then was presented with the silver trowel and mallet by the architects—who are Messrs. Palmer and Turner—and placed the casket, after which he spoke to the assembly. His remarks were followed by a short speech given by Sir Reginald Stubbs, Governor of Hongkong, and the ceremony concluded with a toast to the continued prosperity of the bank.

OPENS PROGRAM

Mr. Edkins, in opening the program of speaking, said:

"On behalf of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation I have great pleasure in welcoming Your Excellencies here today, also the many friends of the bank of all nationalities who are present. It is a great compliment to the bank over which I have the honor to preside, that His Majesty's Minister, Sir Beilby Alston, should come from Peking to lay the foundation stone of a building that will mark a new stage of the development of the bank with the progress of this Settlement and its great trade, linked up as they are together; and that the Commander-in-Chief of the China Station, Sir Alexander Duff, and the Governor of Hongkong, Sir Reginald Stubbs, should also have made it convenient to be present. I am glad to see as an indication of goodwill and good feeling that so many of the public with whom the bank has relations have honored the occasion with their presence. It gives all of us connected with the bank pleasure to have with us today Mr. Vivian Dent, his son and grandson, representing as they do, the second, third and fourth generation of one of the founders of the bank in 1865, Mr. John Dent. The character of this gathering is a convincing testimony to the cosmopolitan

CONGRESS WARNED BY HARDING TO KEEP PLACE

President Says "Hands Off" In International Policies

SENATE KNUCKLES

"Disarmament Recommendation" To Be Cut From Naval Bill

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, May 4.—It is announced that President Harding objects to the provision contained in the Naval Appropriations Bill, requesting him to call a Naval disarmament conference, on the ground that it might appear to convey a Congressional recommendation on international policies within the jurisdiction of the Executive.

It is stated that the Bill, which has already passed the House of Representatives, will therefore be submitted to the Senate without this provision.

It is understood that President Harding desires approximate disarmament but has reiterated his opinion that ample appropriations should be provided to carry out the 1916 program and round out the Navy before a disarmament program is established.

Washington, May 4.—The Senate Naval Committee has ordered the Naval Bill to be reported after increasing the total appropriations from $396,000,000 to $496,000,000, thus restoring it to almost the same form in which it was defeated last March.

Senator Borah's amendment, requesting President Harding to call an international disarmament conference, was defeated in committee.

HALDANE OFFERS PROGRAM TO LIFT NAVY EFFICIENCY

Asks Separation Of Line And Staff, With Training For Dominion Officers

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 4.—The enhancement of the efficiency of the Navy throughout the Empire was the key-note of a speech in the House of Lords today by Lord Haldane, who advocated the separation of the strategic side of the Naval War Staff from the Administrative side, dwelt on the successful working of the Imperial Defence Committee, and urged the formation of an Imperial Naval War Staff.

He hoped there would be a College at which officers from the Dominions could be trained, so that a cohesion of ideas would be formed.

Lord Crewe supported Lord Haldane's suggestions.

Lord Lee, First Lord of the Admiralty, replying, emphasised the necessity for the closest co-operation between the Naval and Military Staffs, though he deprecated a coalition. The separation desired by Lord Haldane had, he said, already been effected as far as was practicable for the present.

He pointed out that Dominions had already been invited to send naval officers to the Naval Staff College and would participate there and in administrative work at the Admiralty, for the purpose of obtaining a thorough acquaintance with our whole system. The matter, he concluded, would be more fully explored at the forthcoming Imperial Cabinet meeting. The Admiralty wholeheartedly approved of it.

Britain Restricts Municipal Lighting

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—The Government has prohibited, owing to the coal shortage, public lighting by gas and electricity in towns with a population of under 5,000, except as far as is necessary for police purposes. In larger towns, public lighting must be reduced to 25 percent of the normal, and electric power must be reduced by 25 percent.

Illinois Authorities Experiment With Music As Cure For Insanity

AN interesting test of the effects of music on an insane person was held at the Illinois State Hospital for the insane recently. Six women inmates were subjected to the tests and but one responded. This insane woman, a native of a European country, soon started to sing a native song which Moissaye Boguslawski had repeatedly played upon the piano. The photo shows the experiment with M. Boguslawski at the piano and Dr. D. B. Rotman watching the effects of the music on the insane woman.

Milady's Hats Have Tough Time Of It In These Parts

BY ELSIE McCORMICK

It may be true that Chinese women sing only a feeble treble in the matrimonial duet. It may be true that Friend Husband never takes them out to dinner parties and that they don't know what it is to appear on a decollette gown. But at least they have one tremendous advantage over the pale missees. They don't have to wear hats.

Something always happens to hats after they arrive in Shanghai. We don't know just what it is, but it does. It's psychological. There is a prevalent impression that there aren't any attractive hats in China and every new chapeau does its best to justify the view. No matter if it does appear perky when worn off the boat or extracted from its tissue paper wrappings at the Customs Office. In just a little while it will list heavily to port or begin to settle at the stern, and then the wearer will no longer be mistaken for a griffin. If you look at the hats in some of the shop-windows and compare them with the majority which you see on the streets, you will conclude that Shanghai reserves one set of headgear to display and another to wear.

BITTER SUBJECT

We are peculiarly bitter on the subject of hats. Fresh with innocent optimism, we embarked from Vancouver with our crowning glories packed in a milliner's cardboard box. When we reassembled our baggage at Yokohama we concluded that a peculiarly heavy trick elephant which rumor said was aboard must have practiced all his tricks with one foot on our hat-box. Or else one of the cook's assistants used it to sit on when he peeled potatoes in the galley. Anyway, in salvaging the wreckage we extracted one collapsible hat that had proved itself by collapsing into a cross between a dust-cloth and an inverted pocket, something that had once been a feathered turban but which now resembled a chicken after a collison with a Ford; and a summer hat that would have served excellently as an exhibit in a murder trial to show where the blow fell which killed the victim.

All we had left was our newest and best hat from New York which was hanging in the stateroom and a three-cornered velvet affair which looked possible but not probable when extracted from the fatal box. That hat finally came to be a nightmare to us. We put it on hopefully many times, only to be disillusioned by a corner that stood up above the others like the prow of an old Greek galley, or a brim that resembled in contour the Great Wall of China as it meanders over the hills of Chihli. Many a friend has pounced on it with gleaming eyes and a remark to the effect that it only needed a little straightening up. Many a friend has pinched the corners, preened the wispy feathers, smoothed the brim, and returned it to us with a cheerful. "Now try it on!" Many a time we have tried it on in a hopeful spirit that crashed to earth as soon as we interviewed a mirror, leading us to remark unconvincingly, "It does look better, doesn't it?" hoping meanwhile that said friend would depart so as not to learn that we didn't intend to wear her handiwork outdoors.

A SAD TALE OF HATS

After trying in vain to lose it we finally left it behind us at a hotel in Peking, only to be chased to the station by a room-boy who returned the wreck to us through the car-window and who had to be kumshawed for his highly unnecessary service. We finally threw the hat out the window into a Chihli field, where it perched on the top of a grave-mound and formed a unique offering to the ancestor. We trust that he got more enjoyment out of it than we did.

Our best New York hat we lost in the Ningpo River, while standing pensively on the deck of the Hsin Pekin. Just before it went down for the third time, it was rescued by a coolie in a sampan, who is probably wearing it to the glory of his native village and the pride of his untutored heart. Since then we acquired a lacquered hat-box which filled up so promptly with other things that there is no room for hats. But as we have no hats left anyway, it doesn't make much difference.

One of the favorite Shanghai models seen on the street but not in shop-windows is the pancake mode, the brim of which droops all around like a griddle-cake with no visible means of support. Then there is the small, tight-fitting turban that doubtless began life as a larger hat from which all deck-space has since been removed. Also one frequently sees various editions of the hat which somebody with a smaller head-size sent out from home, and which fits like a basket of wash carried on the head of an Italian peasant woman.

Not all Shanghai hats were improperly reared, however. Go to a tea-dance and you can see airy little things built of tulle and gold lace which the tailor kidnapped from somebody's evening dress, and which can be looked at without wincing. But unfortunately a great many hats in the city look as if they were suffering from curvature of the brim and acute psychosis of the trimming. As for us, we wish those peach-basket hats that were in style a few years ago would come back again. We happen to know where we can get a lot of peach-baskets.

Berlin Denies Making New Offer To Allies; Foch In Paris

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—The ultimatum to Germany has been signed and will be handed to the German Ambassador today. It makes reference to disarmament and the punishment of war criminals. The ultimatum expires at 10 o'clock on the night of May 11.

London, May 4.—Marshal Foch and Admiral Grasset have returned to Paris. The members of the Reparations Commission arrived here this morning.

Berlin, May 4.—In consequence of the United States' reply to the German Note, the Imperial Government has tendered its resignation, but consented to remain in office for the time being.

Berlin, May 4.—It is officially denied here that Germany has made a new offer to the Allies.

London, May 4.—The German Ambassador in London is ignorant of any new offer from Germany, of which the Reparations Commission has also heard nothing.

London, May 5.—The Supreme Council, whose conference was unexpectedly prolonged till today, discussed during the afternoon with the members of the Reparations Commission the method and time of payment of the Reparation. The Commission decided to adopt the methods of payment as approved by the Supreme Council, and will notify them to Germany.

Late yesterday evening the English version of the Agreement was signed.

London, May 5.—The Supreme Council last evening telegraphed a formal invitation to the United States Government inviting American participation in the Supreme Council and the Conference of Ambassadors.

A communique issued by the Reparations Commission says that from today the Allies are proceeding with the preliminary measures for the occupation of the Ruhr region and have invited the Reparations Commission to notify the German Government by tomorrow at the latest of its decision regarding the time and methods of Germany's payment of her debt to the Allies and to summon Germany to declare categorically within six days of the receipt of the above decision her resolution unreservedly to carry out her obligations regarding reparations, disarmament and the trial of war criminals. Otherwise the Allies will proceed on May 12 to occupy the Ruhr valley and to take other military and naval measures. The occupation, it is added, will last until Germany has fulfilled these conditions.

ADVISORY BODY ASSUMES OFFICE NEXT WEDNESDAY

The Chinese Advisory Board elected by the Chinese Ratepayers' Association has been requested by the Municipal Council to assume office on May 11.

The names of the five advisors were approved by the Consular Body last week. They are Mr. Sun Han-chang, manager of the Bank of China; Mr. H. Y. Moh, manager of the Teh Dah and Hou Seng Cotton Mills of Shanghai; Mr. Y. S. Ziar, local attorney; Mr. K. P. Chen, manager of the Shanghai Commercial Savings Bank and Mr. David Z. T. Yui, general secretary of the National Committee of the Y.M.C.A.

ANITA LOOS
(Mrs. John Emerson)

Motion Picture Scenario Writer Who Is Said To Earn A Salary Of $100,000 A Year

Mrs. John Emerson, who writes under the name of Anita Loos, ranks high among the women in America who earn more than $25,000 a year. Mrs. Emerson gained recognition as a dramatic writer, but like many other dramatists, was called into the motion picture industry to devote her talent to scenario writing. She now devotes her entire time to writing motion picture scenarios for one star of the screen and her stories bring her a return said to be $100,000 a year.

POLISH REBELS SIEZE CITIES IN UPPER SILESIA

Allied Forces Turn Guns On Insurgents—Official Circles Alarmed

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 4.—British telegrams state that the Polish outbreak in Upper Silesia occurred on Monday night on the eastern border of the Upper Silesian industrial area and in the region of Pless and Rybnik.

The insurgents have captured most of Rybnik. Several soldiers in Polish uniforms participated, and a number of Italian officers and men were wounded. A British police officer was made prisoner but was subsequently released.

It appears that the Allied troops have recaptured Tarnowitz. The French troops are still fighting the rebels at Kattowitz.

British official circles take a very serious view of the movement, which is looked upon as a determined and systematic attempt to anticipate the decision of the Supreme Council by forcibly seizing the disputed areas.

Berlin, May 4.—German semi-official advices from various centers of Upper Silesia show that the Poles have surrounded all and occupied some of, the large towns in the industrial region. German notables have been arrested as hostages.

The occupation of Rybnik, where the Polish flag is flying at the Town Hall, was preceded by sharp fighting with the Italians, whose losses are considerable. The Italians, however, drove the Poles out of the town of Pless and arrested a number of the leaders.

The rebels hold the right bank of the Oder in the Ratibon area, and are conscripting capable men elsewhere.

During the evening, trains from Poland brought troops to Myslowitz, but French troops which arrived later disarmed the insurgents and, after some bomb-throwing, re-occupied the town.

French motor-cars at Laurahuette were subjected to a lively fusillade, to which they effectually replied with their machine-guns.

China Not Likely To Recognize Chita

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, May 4.—Well-informed Chinese circles here believe that there is no possibility at present of the Chinese Government recognising the Chita Government, although repeated requests for recognition are being received from the representatives of the Far Eastern Republic in China.

The Peking garrison has issued orders to the gendarmerie and police to keep strict watch over the movements of Russians in the interior, owing to the receipt of reports from Manchuria that Semenoff's headquarters are sending out large numbers of spies to the interior.

French Cities To Observe Centenary Of Napoleon's Death

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 4.—The national revival of France is evidenced by the preparations which are being made to celebrate the centenary of Napoleon's death tomorrow. Pilgrimages will be made to the tomb at the Invalides in Paris, where Marshal Foch will deliver an address, his audience including the Allied representatives in Paris. Solemn ceremonies will be held at the Notre Dame and many other churches and the Archbishop of Paris will pronounce absolution at the moment corresponding to the time of Napoleon's death, when salvoes will be fired by 101 guns and flags lowered to half mast. Besides in Paris, there will also be very impressive celebrations in Corsica and at Mayence.

League Hopes To Kill Opium Trade

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, May 4.—The Consultative Commission of the League of Nations has been entrusted with the control of the traffic in opium and other harmful drugs. It is opined that the object is to assist the Council of the League with a view to the execution of the provisions of the Hague Opium Convention.

Sir John Jordan, representing Great Britain, and Mr. Hamilton Wright, representing America, were present as experts. The Commission asked the Council to request the members of the League who had not yet ratified the Convention to do so without delay.

Mixed Court Jottings

Three coolies were sentenced to one month's imprisonment each by the Mixed Court yesterday for breaking into one of Jardine, Matheson's godowns on Yuenfong Road and stealing a quantity of sugar.

A Chinese appeared yesterday on the charge of highway robbery of two Japanese on the Dixwell Road. Two other men having been convicted and sentenced previously for participation in the offense the man was remanded for trial by the Assessor who heard the other cases.

Convicted of running a den at 45 Tong Kwe Fong in which morphin and morphia injections were sold, one Chinese was sentenced to four months' imprisonment and another to one month. It was shown that the first accused's mother is at present serving a three months' term for a similar offense.

Thirty-four motor car cases and one involving a motor cycle were heard by the special Traffic Court yesterday. Fines ranging from $3 to $30 were assessed. There was only one charge of improper driving, the others being chiefly violation of various traffic regulations.

Two private ricsha coolies caught plying their vehicles for hire were fined $1 each yesterday. They proffered identical excuses. "Our masters were at the races," they said. "All the hongs were closed, and we had nothing to do."

Asiatic Society In Annual Meeting

New officers were elected and reports for the year read at the annual meeting of the Royal Asiatic Society, held yesterday afternoon at the headquarters of the organisation on Museum Road. Sir Everard D. H. Fraser, K. C. M. G., occupied the chair. The following officers were unanimously chosen: president, Sir Everard Fraser; vice-presidents, Rev. F. L. Hawks-Pott and Mr. Samuel Couling; curator of the museum, Dr. C. Noel Davis; librarian, Mrs. F. Ascough; assistant librarian, Mrs. C. E. Maguire; honorary treasurer, Mr. A. C. Hynes; editor of the journal, Rev. Evan Morgan; Councilors, Mr. H. A. Wilden, Mr. C. Kliene, Mr. R. D. Abraham, Comd. H. A. D. J. Gyles, and Rev. A. P. Parker; honorary secretary, Mr. A. D. Blackburn.

In presenting his report, Mr. Isaac Mason, retiring secretary, stated that the membership of the Royal Asiatic Society is now 527, a total of 52 names having been added during the year. Seven public meetings have been held during the session, besides several meetings of the Council. Dr. John Fryer, Mrs. F. Ascough, and Professor Paul Peillott. Mr. Mason, who is retiring from office owing to his imminent departure from Shanghai, who expressed gratitude for the co-operation he has had from members during his five terms as secretary. He also presented the report of the honorary treasurer, which shows a balance of $1,887.

Mrs. Maguire gave the report of the librarian in the absence of Mrs. Ascough. Over fifty books have been added to the library during the year and a catalogue is being prepared. Dr. Davis, curator of the museum, reported that Dr. Stanley had presented the museum with his collection upon his departure from Shanghai.

Before the close of the meeting a special vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Mason and a general vote to all the officers who had served during the year.

ECONOMIST AGENT BACK FROM TRIP OF INVESTIGATION

Dr. Frederic Lee Pays Visit To Northern Centers And To Legation

Dr. Frederic E. Lee, Economist Consul of the United States who has recently been detailed to the American Consulate General here for service in China, has just returned from a trip in North China in connection with his work in making special economic investigations for the Department of State. On this trip Dr. Lee visited Nanking, Tsinanfu, Tsingtau, Kalgan, Tientsin, and some days were spent with the American Legation in Peking.

In the extension of the foreign service of the Department of State the aim of the department has been to give a greater amount of service to its nationals living abroad, and a greater amount of economic information to the American public than has been possible heretofore.

SPECIALISTS APPOINTED

For this reason a number of economic specialists have been appointed as Economist Consuls to conduct special economic investigations in various countries, and to further extend the usefulness of the American Consular Service in serving American interests.

In picking out the countries where service and information of this kind were considered of great importance at this time, China, with Shanghai as its logical commercial and economic center, was selected as a field for the work of an Economist Consul. The other countries in which work of this character has been undertaken are Germany, France, Chihli and the Argentine Economist Consuls will also shortly be appointed for Great Britain and Italy.

Since coming to Shanghai in December Dr. Lee has spent most of his time in various parts of China, getting in touch with economic conditions in the different regions preparatory to making special investigations covering the country as a whole, in which the co-operation and assistance of the other consular and governmental officers in China will be enlisted. Parts of February and March were spent in the regions of Canton, Hongkong, Macao, Swatow, Amoy and Foochow.

TO MAKE OTHER TRIPS

For some weeks Dr. Lee will remain in Shanghai studying American interests and business conditions here, after which time further trips will be taken into Manchuria and the Upper Yangtsze regions.

Indicative of the kind of material and subjects dealt with by the Economist Consul for China a comprehensive investigation is being launched at the present time dealing with currency, banking and finance in China in relation to currency reform. Preliminary reports have been made on such subjects as "Important Gold Movements to the United States from China," The Plans for the Shanghai Mint and "Living Conditions in China."

With the opening of this new phase of consular activity abroad the American Consulates in China and particularly the Consulate-General in Shanghai, to which the Economist Consul is detailed, are desirous of giving to Americans in China the greatest possible amount of service and co-operation in order that legitimate American interests may be extended.

71 Indictments In Chicago Graft

(U. S. Navy Radio through Reuter)

Chicago, May 3.—A Federal Grand Jury has returned 71 indictments, charging corporations, contractors, unions and individuals with a conspiracy to restrain building in Chicago.

BYE-ELECTION RESULT

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—The result of the Hastings by-election was as follows: Lord Eustace Percy (Coalition Unionist) 11,685; Mr. Davies (Labour) 5,437; Mr. Blackman (Liberal) 4,246.

The Waring Company

Mr. H. B. Waring's brilliant Company staged Sutro's powerful analysis of a phase of London Society during the War days, the utter truth of which has been amply confirmed by those self-centred writings called "My Memoirs" by a notorious female called Margot.

I understand the Warings rehearsed "The Choice" under Du Maurier's eye at Wyndham's Theater in London, and the enthusiastic applause, act by act, of the audience last evening culminating in a hurricane of clapping at the final fall of the curtain testified our appreciation of the artistry and power of this wonderful young actress, Jeannette Sherwin, who is now playing in Shanghai.

Thirty years ago her famous mother, Madame Amy Sherwin, received a large piece of Silver Plate from the Shanghai A.D.C. as tribute to her genius, and today Madame Sherwin's brilliant daughter, Jeannette, is playing the most exacting and exhausting roles night after night, unfolding to us the infinite variety, pleasaunce, pathos, raillery, love and the fierce passion of a great emotional actress. In a very few years from now Jeannette Sherwin will take London by storm.

Another Charles Frohman will arise and will carry her off to New York.

We who see her now in the fresh radiance of her youth and beauty know that she is destined to be great.

These are the feelings with which I left the Lyceum after witnessing Jeannette Sherwin's Lady Clarissa Caerleon, the character study that Sutro modelled the living daughter of an English Duke who was one of "The Souls," the set of the wife of the late Prime Minister of England.

There are three other actress comrades of Miss Sherwin, two of whom played elderly parts, Miss Hallatt's Lady Jemima Ballardaile, Miss Alys Ree's—Mrs. Cordways—and the trifle of Ann Knapp by Miss Edith Smith, which demonstrate the finesse, the comedy, and the thoroughness of their art.

The make-up of Mrs. Cordways when she discards her mourning to welcome the fiancée of her brilliant son, gave us a beautiful matron, tender, dignified of a countenance surpassingly sweet.

Miss Alys Rees, now youthful, need never fear the passage of years if life's journey carries her to the haven of her Mrs. Cordways.

The John Ingleby Co[illegible]ays —Minister of Munitions—of Mr. Quartermaine was remarkable for a few moments of the most marvellous poignancy at the close of the Third Act when the actor sits silently, tensely, realising the cataclysm of his dismissal by Lady Clarissa Caerleon. It was the greatest test of an actor's timbre the eloquence of a silence that could be felt. No wonder the audience demanded him again and again.

I want to congratulate Mr. Frank Vosper on his Robert Dalman, the young ex-Captain to whom Clarissa was great enough to go straight to and wildly confess her Love when the difference between admiration, respect, honor for Ingleby, and her love hunger for the loyal honest boy lover Bobble had dawned on her.

"The Choice" is a great and powerful portrayal of many, many things and these actors and actresses prove themselves worthy indeed of Sutro's genius.

Tonight, Mr. Hemmerde K.C.'s "Butterfly on the Wheel" is to be played.

Every married man and woman in Shanghai who can understand English, and every legal practitioner ought to go tonight!

I saw this in London and I shall see it again this evening.

It is a terrible play, but it is the truth of those terrible arenas, the Divorce Courts of the High Courts of Justice of Great Britain!

"NOT LIKE THE SAME CHILDREN

BABY'S OWN TABLETS HAVE DONE THEM SO MUCH GOOD."

The little son and daughter of Mrs. Xavier Manie are splendid examples of what Baby's Own Tablets can do for children. Mrs. Manie, who resides at Stoney Point, Ontario, Canada, states:—"I must tell you that I consider your Baby's Own Tablets a wonderful medicine for children. I have a baby boy and a little girl. My little girl was constantly feverish, had no appetite and was very pale. My baby boy was cutting his teeth, his bowels were irregular, and he was very cross. I gave them the Tablets and they are not like the same children, they have done them so much good."

Baby's Own Tablets give satisfaction whenever they are tried. You can get them from your chemist, or at 60 cents the vial, post free, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

Collegians Debate Tonight At Y.M.C.A.

There will be a debate between Shanghai College and the University of Nanking tonight at 8 o'clock in the Martyr's Memorial Hall. The subject to be debated is "Resolved that the educational system of China should be so decentralised as to give each province autonomy in all educational matters."

The two sides: Nanking (Aff.) —Chen Kwei-chi, Chu Feng-chang and Wei Hsiah-ren.

Shanghai (Neg.) —William Chen, S. C. Dzau and S. K. Lo.

The judges will be: Dr. T. H. Lee, President of Fuhtan University; Dr. Fong F. Sec. and Miss L. J. Tuttle.

New 'Culture' Pearls Good As The Genuine

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—Much discussion has been aroused amongst dealers in precious stones by the appearance on the London market of a "cultured" pearl which, it is claimed, cannot be distinguished from a natural pearl. It has been introduced by K. Mikimoto, Japanese dealers of Hatton Gardens, who claim that they do not fake but scientifically stimulate nature in the production of pearls.

Colonial Chief To Ask About 'Mui Tsai'

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 4.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons today as to why the "mui tsai" system is countenanced in British Hongkong, seeing that it is declared illegal in China, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Colonies, Major E. F. L. Wood, promised to enquire of the Governor of Hongkong what the position is as regard the transfer of a "mui tsai" from one household to another.

EXPLORER GIVES SECOND LECTURE ON DASH TO POLE

Hundreds Of School Children Hear Story By Capt. Evans Of The Carlisle

The "Standing Room Only" sign was hung out at the Lyceum theater yesterday afternoon long before the time set for the illustrated lecture by Capt. E. R. G. R. Evans, C. B., D. S. O. of the British Cruiser Carlisle on the disappointing dash to the South Pole in 1912 of Capt. R. F. Scott. Children composed almost half of the audience.

Captain Evans who was second in command to Capt. Scott on the fateful expedition of 1910-12, repeated his lecture as given at the Olympic theater Sunday April 24, under the auspices of the Shanghai Race Club for the benefit of the Union Jack Club. Last night's lecture for which there was such a great demand for seats, was given in aid of the Canteen Fund of the British Yangtsze fleet.

The slides showing the life in the winter depot the pictures with the "human" touch and the "animal" pictures, of seals, penguins, Siberian sled dogs and Manchurian ponies had great interest for the younger element of the audience. But the illustrations of more serious character gripped them too. They appreciated the wonderful story of sacrifice and suffering and disappointment that was being told.

Capt. Scott's little vessel, the Terra Nova, with a complement of sixty officers, scientists and men left New Zealand on Nov. 29, 1910. Many pictures of life aboardship were shown. The approach to the frozen area was portrayed by slides showing a frozen sea field in the making—first the little cakes of mushy ice, then the groupings of cakes, and finally the solid field. The party set up its winter base at a point named Capt. Evans, in honor of the lecturer. The winter was spent in scientific exploration and in the establishing of food depots further south.

THE REAL DASH

On October 24, 1911, the real dash for the Pole was made. Two supporting parties returned north after the first 500 miles; a third party returned after arriving at Latitude 85 deg. 7 min. South and the last, under command of Capt. Evans, returned from the 87th parallel on January 4, 1912. Capt. Scott continued to the Pole with but four men.

Capt. Evans and his party suffered untold hardship on their return trip of 1,500 miles. The commander was stricken ill with scurvy, and was hauled on a sled for many days, in spite of his request to be left that the others might proceed in the hope of reaching assistance. Finally when within a few miles of the base, the strongest of the party hiked to the depot and sent sled to the exhausted pair out on the ice.

Capt. Scott's party reached the Pole January 17, 1912 only to find that he had been superceded by the Norwegian explorer, Raold Amundsen. A picture showed the Norwegian flag flying at the bottom of the world. The return trip was a journey of horror, from Capt. Scott's record. One man died of concussion of the brain incurred in two falls. Another, Capt. Oates, frostbitten on feet and hands until he could proceed no further, walked out into a blizzard and death that the party might not be further detained. The remaining three continued in slow arduous stages until within 11 miles of the base, when they were forced to camp in a blizzard. In that camp they died—starved, and exposed until frozen.

A slide showing the mound of snow and ice, with its crude little cross, which had been erected over the tent containing the bodies of the three explorers aroused much emotion among the audience. Capt. Evans himself showed his deep feelings in concluding his lecture.

China Continuation Committee Begins Its Annual Meeting

Rev. L. H. Roots Presides At Opening Of Conference Here

The China Continuation Committee commenced its ninth annual meeting yesterday in the Union Church Lecture Hall, the Right Reverend L. H. Roots, chairman, presiding. There were about sixty present, Chinese and missionary delegates being about equally divided. Among those attending were the Right Reverend C. R. Duppuy, D. D., Bishop of Victoria; Dr. Henry and Mrs. Hodgkin of the Friends' Foreign Missionary Society, and Rev. C. F. Saywell, M. A., Secretary of the Church Missionary Society.

In his opening speech the chairman referred to the National Christian Conference to meet in 1922 and the "Intellectual Renaissance" in China as being the two outstanding movements immediately affecting Christian work in China. The need to meet the latter is regarded as one of the chief problems before this meeting. He then dwelt on the movement for world-wide christian brotherhood as seen in the Lambeth Conference, the Geneva Conference on Faith and Order and the newly organised International Missionary Committee. He also stated that the reorganising of the Federal Council of Churches under the chairmanship of Dr. Robert E. Speer was a most significant movement. Reference was also made to the continued development of union missionary institutions in China and to movements for denominational unity among the Presbyterians, the Anglicans and the Lutherans.

In conducting the devotional service Bishop Birney drew attention to the fact that Christianity is essentially a life. He emphasised the need also of an "unquestioning faith." He deprecated the fear of that skepticism which denies God, but warned against skepticism which questions the possibility of men attaining the ideals of Christ. Realisation of this ideal is not confined to either "Conservatives" or "Liberals," he declared. It is in fact the realisation of the life of God and something which is possible for both.

The Reverend E. C. Lobenstine reported on the growing work in the office of the China Continuation Committee and the increasing number of missionary organisations now working in its office building. Reference was made to liberal help rendered by different missions in allocating individuals to help. Of these the Reverend L. I. Moffet has been compelled to retire on account of ill health. The appointment of Peter Chuan as publicity secretary of the China For Christ movement was announced. Mr. Lobenstine also reported that 216,000 items, including letters, reports, pamphlets and bulletins had been sent out from the office during the year. It was announced that the English edition of the Survey of Christian Work in China was nearly finished and that the Chinese edition had been started. It is anticipated that this survey will be of incalculable help to the Chinese church in its plannings for the future. It was hoped that the English edition of this survey would be published in October. While the Chinese Church Year Book is being published as usual in Chinese the China Mission Year Book was held up owing to the tremendous pressure of the work on the survey.

GIRLS' SCHOOL TO CELEBRATE 60TH BIRTHDAY

Mary Farnham Institution To Give Program; Seek Expansion Fund

Mary Farnham School For Girls, oldest foreign mission girls' school in Shanghai, celebrates its sixtieth birthday tomorrow, signalishing the event by a presentation of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" and the spurring on of a campaign to raise $13,000 for extension purposes.

Alumni of the institution have rallied to the aid of their Alma Mater both in the matter of raising the fund and in observing the anniversary and it is expected that the entertainment will be largely attended. The play will be given by high school girls who are to be graduated with the class of next July. In addition to the dramatic feature of the program there will be addresses by guests of honor, reports of the school's progress, musical selections and other interesting items.

The school now stands in need of an administration building and three or four dormitories to cope with its increasing demands. The expansion campaign fund is now well under way and it is hoped that tomorrow's celebration will give it added impetus.

The Bandman Co.

Playing to a well filled house in spite of adverse weather the Bandman company scored well again last night with "The New Shop Girl," Gaiety Theater success of a season or so ago. Without any particular sequence of plot the show carried on smoothly and entertainingly, giving scope for considerable individual endeavor, which was well taken advantage of by the principals in the cast.

In the leading feminine role Miss Dolly Prince kept firm hold of the place she has won in the estimation of Shanghai play viewers, while Leland Hudson, carrying the principal masculine part, was eminently satisfying. Grace Barry as "Lady Dodo Singleton," sang in a manner provocative of several encores and Miss Beryl Lucina's dance number was another popular feature of the evening.

200 Kronstadt Men Reach East Russia, Bitter Against Reds

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, May 5.—Two hundred sailors arrived at Blagovieschtchensk on April 24, from a party of 2,000 who have been exiled from Kronstadt to the Far East. The feeling among them is bitterly anti-Bolshevik.

The Chita Constituent Assembly was dissolved on April 27.

The Social - Revolutionaries, Mensheviks and Cadets of Blagovieschtchensk declare that their participation in the Chita Government is irrational, considering that the latter became purely Communist in its composition after the election of the Directorate. The Social Revolutionaries and Mensheviks consider it necessary to change the composition of the Directorate, but the Cadets say it is impossible to do so by peaceful means.

At a meeting of Cossack delegates at Grodekovo, Semenoff was elected Ataman of all the Cossacks. The Second Ufa Division of Kappel's forces, having decided to recognise Semenoff, has joined the Grodekovo command.

Sixty-three cases of plague had been reported here up to yesterday. The doctors have been compulsorily mobilised, and 11 of their number have been arrested for failing to comply with the order to serve in the anti-plague detachment.

13 MILLION TONS OF SHIPPING TIED UP BY U.S. STRIKE

Admiral Benson Says Board Will Not Compromise On 15 Percent Wage Cut

(U. S. Navy Radio through Reuter)

New York, May 4.—The trade union leaders have predicted that the strike of marine workers will result within 24 hours in the complete suspension of American shipping.

It is estimated that 125,000 workers and 2,000 ships will be affected, including 30,000 workers and more than 200 ships at this port. The total tonnage involved is 13,000,000, of which 7,500,000 tons are owned by the Shipping Board.

The strike has not only affected ships flying the American flag, but also foreign craft attempting to sign on American crews under the reduced wage scale, the labor leaders declare.

Washington, May 4.—Admiral Benson, chairman of the Shipping Board, has announced that there will be no compromise in regard to the 15 percent wages reduction for marine workers. He called on all loyal citizens to rally to the support of the flag, and promised the full protection of the Shipping Board to those who would assist in keeping ships operating.

There is no further word as to the appointment of a wage commission from White House, and it is officially stated that the matter is in the hands of Mr. Davis (Secretary of Labor) and Mr. Hoover (Secretary of Commerce).

Shipping agencies in Shanghai had received no word yesterday concerning the threatened tie-up in American ports, but keen anxiety is felt concerning the movement of vessels about to sail for this port.

The steamer Colombia of the Pacific Mail was due to sail from San Francisco on April 30, but no word had been received at the Pacific Mail office yesterday concerning the vessel.

Among other vessels due to sail for Shanghai are the Nanking of the China Mail which was scheduled to leave San Francisco yesterday, the cargo carriers West Henshaw, due to leave San Francisco May 15, the West Ivis due to sail from Seattle May 15, the West Nivaria, due to sail from San Francisco on May 16 and the Wheatland and Montana of the Admiral line, due to leave Seattle on May 12.

Cafe Man Gets Hard Labor Sentence For Assault On A Girl

Charles Maitland, formerly proprietor of the Palermo cafe in the old "Trenches" district, was found guilty in the British Police Court yesterday, of an assault upon Miss V. Zelinsky, formerly an employe of his bar and latterly an entertainer at a local cafe. He was sentenced by Magistrate King to three months' hard labor.

The woman in her claim asserted that on Tuesday morning Maitland forced his way into her house at No. 16 Dent Lane while she was asleep and that he took a pair of scissors and threatened to kill her and then himself unless she "loved" him. She ran to the kitchen and locked herself in. Defendant broke down two doors to get at her and then struck and bit her. He forced a vow that claimant would not inform the police or her consul. After he had gone to sleep the woman telephoned for help.

The claimant presented a battered appearance in court. Her eyes were bloodshot and blackened and there were bruises all over her face. She claimed also to have been bitten on the chest.

Maitland pleaded guilty. The woman had been his sweetheart, he said, but they had quarrelled and separated. She had threatened once to "smash him up." They had had some drinks together Tuesday night and later had gone to her house and there was a "little scrap." He claimed that his drinks were responsible for his actions.

FILIPINOS PLAN TO CONVERT WOOD TO THEIR CAUSE

Data Prepared To Convince General They Are Capable Of Self Government

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Manila (by mail).—Pending the arrival of the Wood-Forbes commission of investigation in the Philippines, all government departments and bureaus are preparing reports designed to show the achievements made by the Filipinos under the Harrison regime. These data will be submitted to the investigators early in May.

The Democrata or opposition party, and many local American residents are also collecting evidence to be laid before the commission, most of which, it is said, will direct attention to alleged abuses committed by the dominant Nacionalista party.

The two commissioners and many of the members of their staff will be quartered in Malacanang palace in Manila, the official residence of the governor-general. Several correspondents of American newspapers will accompany the party.

Filipino politicians and newspapers profess to welcome the investigation, although some have charged that Mr. Forbes is biassed against the Harrison administration and will report unfavorably on the capacity of Filipinos for independence. The labor element in the Phillippines also passed resolutions condemning Mr. Forbes as a "capitalist," but these resolutions were withdrawn by the advice of Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Senate, who has a strong following among labor organisations here. The consensus of opinion in the American community and perhaps among the better informed Filipinos is that the independence movement will be delayed indefinitely.

Manila (by mail).—The University of Santo Tomas, the oldest educational institution under the American flag, has appealed to the Pope for permission to admit women students. Authorities of the University say, however, that if the permission is granted, the young women will be rigidly segregated from the men students both in and out of the class rooms.

Santo Tomas was founded in 1611 in the Walled City of Manila, on the site which it still occupies. It has been continuously under the direction of the Roman Catholic Church, and numbers among its former students many Filipino revolutionists and patriots, the best known being Dr. Jose Rizal, who was executed by the Spaniards shortly before the American occupation of the Islands. It is about 25 years older than Harvard University, the oldest in the continental United States.

The attendance at Santo Tomas is approximately 1,000 students. The University possesses a library of valuable manuscripts, many of them containing the earliest accounts of the discovery and conquest of the Philippines.

Manila, May 1 (by mail).—Chinese merchants in the Philippines have sent a delegation to Washington to work for the repeal by Congress of the law rushed through in the closing days of the session of the Philippine legislature, providing that books of commercial houses must be kept in English, Spanish, or a Filipino dialect.

It is also hoped to secure the co-operation of the Peking Government in a protest to the State Department against the law which vitally affects the interests of the Chinese merchants and shopkeepers, who have a virtual monopoly of the retail trade in the islands. Japanese are also affected, although less seriously, there being some 100,000 Chinese in the Philippines as compared with 10,000 or 15,000 Japanese.

The Chinese Consul-General and leading merchants, in a protest to the Governor General, declared the law was merely a veiled attack on their property, and that its enforcement would result in the emigration of large members of Chinese to the East Indies. They also pointed out that it would react seriously on the Philippines by tying up the retail trade in Manila and the provinces.

Manila, May 1 (by mail).—A three-day war game between American military and naval forces in the Philippines has just been concluded, with the army victorious, according to intimations from headquarters, although no official decision has been made public by the umpires.

The problem was the attack and defence of Corregidor, the heavily fortified island at the entrance to Manila bay. Nearly all the naval and coast-defence forces in the Philippines participated in the operations. It is understood the destroyers attempted to run the channel at night, the Rizal and Hart being nearly successful. Night flying by military and naval aircraft was a feature of the manoeuvres, and the base at Olongapo, north of Manila, was utilised by the fleet.

Manila, May 1 (by mail).—The proposed port improvements of Manila, calling for an expenditure of more than 100,000 pesos, will soon come up for serious consideration by the United States Government, according to information recently given out by the Governor-General's office here.

It is stated that a commission, composed of representatives of the American war, navy, commerce and state departments, the United States, shipping board, and a delegate from the Philippine Government, will be assembled in Washington to settle the question of making Manila the American trade base in the Far East through the construction of additional docks and breakwaters.

JAP STEAMER LOST

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 4.—According to a message from Port Townsend, the Japanese steamer Tokuyo Maru, which caught fire at sea, is reported as totally lost. All the crew were saved, except for nine missing.

The Tokuyo Maru was insured to the value of £300,000, and there is likely to be a considerable insurance interest on the cargo she was carrying.

Proposal To Limit Rubber Output Fails

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 4.—In the House of Commons today at questiontime, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Colonies, Major E. F. L. Wood, stated that the Colonial Office had received proposals for legislation restricting the output of rubber in Malaya, but after careful consideration it had been decided not to introduce legislation, because such a policy would involve financial liabilities which the Malay States would not be able to afford, and would also necessitate undue Government interference in economic conditions.

Major Wood deeply regretted the present state of the rubber industry, but felt, he said, that conditions must be allowed to right themselves.

Baer: SAYS "BUGS"

ROUGHTOWN HAD TOUGH SUBURBS

The Glutt Lived There, And Was Tougher Than An Alligator Skin Steak

BY 'BUGS BOER'

Dear Sir:

When you say that Gink Fowler was champion of Roughtown you are making a statement broader than a mackerel's forehead. My man, Tin Cann, knocked him flatter than a wet bath mat. Gink had all his friends at the ringside. To show their appreciation they carried Tin Cann out of the building on their insteps. For two years after that fight Gink couldn't raise a knife to his lips. Today you will find him sorting out Napoleons in Bloomingdale.

Yours fraternally like oil and fire, H. J. K., Brooklyn.

Tin Cann was probably the best labelled fighter in the ring. That's all he did. They had to tie him to get him into the ring with Gink Fowler, the champion of Roughtown on rainy Tuesdays. He had all the fighting instinct of an eight-legged rabbit. Knowing that if they removed the ropes from Tin Cann he would take it on the lamm, the Roughtown authorities compelled him to battle with both hands tied and the champers on his feet.

This battle was as one-sided as the heels of a bowlegged hobo's ground grippers. Immediately after this fight Tin Cann claimed the championship from a safe distance. He went to the Isle of Yap and was elected Mayor of Yap on suspicion. He was so scared of Roughtown that he wouldn't even look at a map of North America.

GINK WAS SCIENTIFIC CHAMP

Of Gink's many so-called opponents none put up better battles than The Glutt. They met exactly 567 times. And each time it was a battle to the finish of the growler. Gink had a system that puzzled all the barkeeps in Roughtown. He used to butter the inside of the growler with lard. The Roughtown barkeeps were adepts at filling a growler with foam. But Gink's buttered growler had 'em stopped. It killed off the foam and the barkeeps had to crowd the old growler with good beer.

This incident is quoted merely to show how scientific the champ of Roughtown was. We will admit that Gink never claimed the championship of Roughtown's suburbs. That part of the town was too tough. The suburbanites were the gamest guys in the world. During the war they organised the Suburban Home Guards and used to attack an oil painting of the Kaiser with bale hooks every day.

Their shadows were even dangerous. They threw the most deadly shadow in the world, and if you piped a Roughtown Home Guard tearing off a lammister down the big avenue, you knew that his shadow had turned on him and was napping at his heels like minnows at wet bread.

No living man could venture into the suburbs of Roughtown and escape without paying indemnity to the worms. The main drag was called Bulldoze Avenue. It was eighty miles long on each side of the street. And the curbs were tombstones. The Glutt lived in these suburbs. What a tough bird he was.

HAND LIKE POTATO MASHER

Gink and The Glutt were matched up. Now there was a queer thing about Gink's weight. Some days you could mail him anywhere for two cents. He would weigh sixty pounds on horseback. The next day, he would crash the scales at four hundred pounds, net. He had a left hand that was a perfect potato stabber. And a right that could spear Hamburger steak from any angle.

Gink and The Glutt went into training. Owing to the fact that both of them were cleaned through betting on each other, neither could purchase sparring partners. So they decided to be each other's sparring mates. They trained six months this way. But so deadly was their enmity that not a blow was struck in the whole time.

Families of members shall be understood to include only immediate members of families.

Another provision is that ladies resident in Shanghai who have no male relative resident in Shanghai, duly proposed and seconded and approved by the club committee, may use the swimming bath at an annual charge of $20.

COLLEGE HOLDS TRYOUTS FOR COMING MEET

Shanghai Boys Break Three Local Records In Preliminaries

Preliminary contests for the E. C. I. A. A. track meet, to be held at Soochow on May 14, were held Wednesday afternoon at Shanghai College, when three of the school records were broken in the running off of ten events. The records broken were for the half-mile, the low hurdles and the 440-yard run.

There were not many contestants but those who appeared for the try-outs showed very well. The results were as follows:

100-yard dash—Pan Shan-mei, 1st, Ling Ming-chieh, 2nd, time 10:4-5 sec.

Half-mile—Paul . Hyen, 1st; Yuen Shen Tah, 2nd; times 2:16.

Shot Put—Ging Dung-gien, 36 feet.

220-yards—Pan Shai-mei, 1st; Yang Deh-neng, 2nd; times 25:2/5 sec.

High Jump—Pan Shan-mei, height 4:10¼.

Mile—Yuen Sing-tah, 1st; Pau Hyen, 2nd; time 5:22 3/5.

Low Hurdle—Ging Dja-chu time 30.

Broad Jump—Ging Dji-chu Pan Shan-mei, 18 ft. 5½ in. tie

Pole Vault—Liang Ming-hao height 9.5.

440 yards—Ling She-kwang 1st; Ding Dja-chu, 2nd; time 55 1/5. sec.

Mike O'Dowd Surprised When Johnny Wilson Won The Middleweight Title

This Is Johnny's Eleventh Year In The Ring, And He Hardly Figured To Take The Honors Away From The Minnesotan

BY ROBERT EDGREN

When Johnny Wilson won the middle-weight championship from Mike O'Dowd at Boston last May—twelve rounds and a referee's decision—it was as much a surprise to the rest of the world as it was to Mike. Outside of Boston there was a general impression that Wilson was some sprightly newcomer. Nothing of the sort. This is Wilson's eleventh year in the ring. The general public didn't know much about him simply because he wasn't very much more than a "pork-and-beaner" until he hopped into fame over Mike O'Dowd's unwilling head.

Wilson's record wasn't bad, yet there was little in it to suggest the coming champion. Born in New York in 1893, he began fighting in 1911. His right name is John Panica and he is of Italian descent. In his first two years among the preliminary boys he won fifteen fights with knockouts, lost one and fought a number of no-decision affairs. After that for a few years he went along with a large percentage of wins and a few scattering defeats.

In 1916, for instance, he won eight fights and lost four being beaten by Wild Bill Fleming, Joe White, Tommy Robson and Silent Martin. He lost three fights in 1917 and two in 1918. In 1919 he won eight (six with knockouts) and fought three, draws. He outpointed Leo Houck and Augie Ratner. The rest of the men he fought were little known. He wasn't up among the middleweight "contenders."

Since wining the title Wilson has been of a mild and retiring disposition. Tex Rickard offered him $30,000 to meet Mike O'Dowd, Jeff Smith, Batting Ortega or Boy McCormick, and Wilson couldn't hear the offer at all. He refused to "take a chance." Tommy Ryan, Billy Papke, Kid McCoy, Stanley Ketchel or Bob Fitzsimmons, former champions, would have fought heavy-weight Jack Dempsey for that money. Fitz would have jumped at a chance to fight all of the four men Rickard named, in one night, for $40,000.

It might be argued that Wilson realises his lack of real championship class, and that he is studying up on the game and will come along a little later and meet them all. Not likely. He's an eleven-year veteran now. If there's anything he can learn, he's learned it by this time. Looks more as if Johnny simply intends to realise as much as he can on the title before risking it in a real contest.

Since winning from O'Dowd he has boxed twelve rounds, no decision, with Soldier Bartfield, ten no decision with Young Fisher, gone ten no decision with George Robinson, and stopped Steve Choynski and one or two other unknown third rathers. The rest of his time he has been busy dodging challenges and inventing excuses for not fighting.

IS A SOUTHPAW BOXER

Wilson is a "Southpaw" boxer, and like K. O. Brown, Lew Tendler and some of the others affecting the advanced right-hand, he can swing a fairly wicked left. He has very light legs, good arms and shoulders, big hands, a short neck and a heavy jaw—all good points in a fighter's make-up. He also has speed, some skill, grit and endurance.

But taking Wilson and all his rivals together, the middle-weight class never before was so shy of real championship material as it is today. It's an off season for middle weights. Once the class ranked with the heavy-weight in popular favor. No more.

When the original Jack Dempsey was king of the middle-weights, he and John L. Sullivan and Jack McAuliffe were known as the "Three American Jacks."

Dempsey was a corking boxer. Bob Fitzsimmons, who beat him, was even greater. Dempsey would be called a welter-weight today, as his best fighting weight was far below 150 pounds. Fitz weighed little over 150 when he beat Dempsey and only 158 when he whipped big Jim Corbett for the heavy-weight title. If he were alive and in his prime today there'd be no "contenders" to challenge his right to the middle-weight championship.

RYAN HAD PUNCH

Tommy Ryan, who took the middle-weight title after Fitz drifted into the heavy-weight class, was a great boxer, with a crashing knockout punch. Fitzsimmons was a physical freak, with a heavy-weight's height, reach and frame. Ryan was a normal middle-weight. After Ryan retired several good middle-weights claimed the title.

Joe Thomas now in business in Boston, was a real champion, and it took Stanley Ketchel and three terrific fights to put him out of it.

Thunderbolt Billy Papke had a brief reign when he knocked out Ketchel and then lost the title back to Ketchel again. Frank Klaus, the rugged ironworker, was a corking middle-weight champion while he lasted. George Chip had class until the joke champion, "Al McCoy" Rudolph, a southpaw like Wilson, happened to knock him cold with a wild swinging left uppercut. Rudolph stalled along with the title for years, sticking to safe, no-decision bouts until he grew fat and slow, when Mike O'Dowd bumped him down and out.

The other middle-weights claimed the title from time to time, with fair reason. Mike Gibbons was fast as a streak, a tricky, shifty, hard-hitting middle-weight and almost unbeatable at his best. He lost interest in the title chase when he found all the other claimants dodging him.

GIBBONS SAVES COIN

Anyway, Mike had saved his money, owned a home in St. Paul and another on a lake up in the woods where the fishing is good. He didn't want anything more. After Mike had served through the war as boxing instructor at Camp Dodge he practically retired.

Jeff Smith was a title claimant. He fought two no-decision bouts with Mike Gibbons, beat George Chip, Adrian Hogan and Bernard in France. Pat Bradley, Jimmy Clabwy and Eddie McGorty in Australia, Young Ahearn and many other well-known middle-weights. He lost a twenty-round decision to Carpentier in France and won from Les Darcy in Australia in five rounds, afterward losing to Les Darcy in two. He lost a fifteen-round decision to O'Dowd in New Yor last November, which was his only reverse in a long time. O'Dowd was the aggressor, but Smith showed superior skill and hitting power, and lost through being overcautious.

Boy McCormick is a tall, clever youngster who has been coming on fast during the past year, boxing very well in the Northwest. Battling Ortega is a hard nut to crack, and down in Pennsylvania there's a youngster, All Miller by name, who may fight his way to the top in the middle-weight class. Aside from this small list the middle-weight bunch looks fairly hopeless. There are no Ketchels in sight just now. But you never can tell when a new one will spring up.

WOMAN'S CLUB PLANNING PICNIC FOR U.S. SAILORS

Gobs To Be Entertained On May 23 At Hongkew Park

At a meeting of the American Woman's Club Social Service Department, held yesterday morning at the Carlton Cafe, May twenty-third was selected as the date for the picnic which the club is to give for American sailors. The outing will take place at Hongkew Park, between the hours of three and seven. As it is a club and not a department affair, members are asked to co-operate whether they belong to the Social Service Department or not. Those willing to provide supper for five sailors and act as their hostess should inform either Mrs. N. E. Lurton, North 349, or Mrs. James McDonnel, Central 867.

The Social Service Department will meet again to discuss further plans next Monday morning at 10:30 in the Carlton Cafe. A program of sports for the picnic is being arranged in co-operation with Mr. Durbin of the Navy Y. M. C. A.

FLORENCE REED DOES BRILLIANT WORK AS STAR OF PIONEER FEATURE

Reviewed by Walter K. HILL.

That Florence Reed is starred in "Wives of Men" should be assurance of superlative dramatic entertainment for those who find all too little really good acting in the average run of motion pictures. The Pioneer Film Corporation made the production, written and directed by John M. Stahl, and deserves unstinted praise for the excellence in detail and furnishing that have served as "atmosphere" for the intensely dramatic offering.

Massive settings in scenes of splendor largely confine that action to interiors, and for contrast to the sumptuous furnishings of the mansion where much of the plot develops, there are vistas that show a modest flat and an east side tenement. One gets a father complete idea of how both extremes in New York's population move and habitate. Florence Reed, mistress of the art of make-up, fashion plate and gown model supreme in her class, cannot be too highly praised for her interpretation of an exceedingly difficult role. Her character is one that barely has opportunity to "flash" Miss Reed in her loveliest moods.

relationships of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank.

"I will not unduly delay the ceremony, but this occasion is unique, and regarding you as friends of the bank, I want to touch on the relationship of this new office to the personnel of the bank as well as to the growth of Shanghai. A great bank building is to be erected on this site, a building that will be distinguished even among the fine buildings that are springing up along The Bund. It will stand as witness to the expansion of the bank's business in Shanghai, of the bank as a whole, and of trade and industry in Shanghai and China.

TRIBUTE TO ENTERPRISE

"To an old Shanghailander who comes and goes, the extension of industrial interests, with the adoption of larger and larger business buildings by Chinese and foreigners alike, is ever marked. This new Shanghai is a lasting tribute to the business enterprise of the community, to the value of Chinese and foreign co-operation, and by no means least, to the efficient and judicious government of the Settlements by the Municipal Councils and Court of Consuls. Without the remarkable development of business and industry in Shanghai of the last twenty years this building would not have been planned, but apart from that, it will be splendid testimony to the enterprise, business ability and judgment of the successive chief managers and staffs of the bank, from Sir Thomas Jackson onwards. It will form a link between the achievements of the past staffs with those of the present, and in this connection I would like to record the tribute of the board of directors to Mr. Stephen, the worthy successor in a great managership to Sir Newton Stabb, to Sir Newton Stabb himself, and to their London colleagues, and to the fine staffs of the bank in various commercial centers of the world. It is due to their joint achievements that the bank's business now requires this new building worthy of its position in the finance of the East and of the commerce and industry of Shanghai.

"We are passing through strenuous times; a wave of deep business depression is passing over the commerce of the world, touching us as well as our respective peoples at home. But just as we see these fine new structures arising out of the old on The Bund, so, I believe, we shall see trade and prosperity in China renewed and enlarged at no distant date, and before this new building will be ready for it. We have behind us and our enterprises the wonderful resources of China with the industry and thrift of its great people, and working and co-operating with them there can be no doubt of the future. Throughout the past ten years of political unrest and revolution and counter-revolution in China the inherent financial strength and resiliency of China as a whole have constantly asserted themselves, and I believe will continue to do so.

"Before asking Your Excellency to lay the corner stone," Mr. Edkins concluded, "I will ask Mr. Stephen to speak, chiefly on the past history of the bank in Shanghai, and about the magnificent building that will soon occupy this site."

MR. STEPHEN SPEAKS

Responding, Mr. Stephen said: "Forty-five years ago a ceremony similar to this, but on a much more modest scale, took place near this spot and in due course a substantial brick building arose which has been the home of the bank since that time till last year. For ten years previous to that the bank had been housed in an unpretentious building on the site now occupied by the Palace Hotel. At the outset it was considered a foolishness and an ostentation on the part of the directors and management to erect a building so disproportionate in size to the requirements of the bank, present or prospective. In a few years' time, however, it was found that no mistake had been made as to size, and as time went on adjustments had to be made, including the creation of a Subsidiary Office in Hongkew, to cope with the increasing business, until at last we were forced to consider making a clean sweep of the old building and making a fresh beginning if we meant to conduct our business with comfort and convenience to the public and to ourselves.

"Our predecessors 45 years ago, though they were no doubt able and far seeing men, could not look far enough into the future and did not dream of the great developments awaiting this port and the trade of China generally, and, consequently, of the business of the bank. We cannot blame them, but we have determined not to repeat their mistake if we can help it, and the building that will be erected here will dominate The Bund and will provide for our future requirements, as far as we can see, for ever and a day.

IS SIGN OF FAITH

"The building will be an indication of our faith in the future, in the future development of the trade of China, in the future of this port where we expect all nations will be allowed to trade peacefully for all time, and in the future of the bank which we trust will always maintain its leading position here. We could never have achieved and we can never maintain that position if we did not possess, as I think we do, the good will of our neighbors, Chinese as well as foreign. We have gained that good will by our policy of assisting legitimate trade of all nations liberally and sympathetically, and by encouraging local enterprises to the best of our ability. That policy will be continued as long as the bank exists.

"On the desks in the banking hall that will soon be erected near this spot, we are placing, in imperishable material, a saying from the writings of the sage Confucius—'Within the four seas all men are brethren.' In an International Settlement like this where all men have equal rights, the motto seems very appropriate. It is our earnest hope that the bank in assisting the development of international trade will contribute even a little towards fostering peace and good-will among the nations of the earth whose trade reaches these shores."

When Mr. Stephen had concluded the preliminaries to the laying of the stone were carried out and the British Minister then delivered the ceremonial address.

REVIEWS OLD TIMES

Sir Beilby Alston's address follows:

"Your Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen, our friends, Mr. Edkins and Mr. Stephen have done me a great honor in inviting me here today to lay the foundation stone of the new home of the Hongkong & Shanghai Bank in Shanghai. It is also a privilege and a matter of great personal interest to me to have my name so permanently associated in this manner with the magnificent buildings which are to be erected on this spot.

"It happens that I am myself within a year or two of being contemporary with the original foundation of the Corporation itself in 1864 and for the past 30 years and more it has been my good fortune to have been connected with some of the most important international transactions of the bank.

"With the retirement of my very distinguished predecessor, Sir John Jordan, I am proud to think that there is no one in my service who can claim so many years acquaintance as myself with the prominent gentlemen who have directed the affairs of the bank in London since 1890. My earlier recollections carry me back to Sir Ewen Cameron and Sir Thomas Jackson, and in later years those with whom I have been more closely connected are Mr. Townsend, Sir Charles Addis, and Mr. Hillier.

SYMBOLISES TRADE GROWTH

"The growth and expansion of these new buildings are symbolical of the growth and expansion of British trade, not only in this great metropolis of international enterprise, but throughout the Far East, wherever the ramifications of the bank extend. They speak volumes for the services rendered by the Corporation in fostering and assisting that trade and in so enhancing the prestige of the Brities Empire. As I came along the Bund this morning, I saw other spendid buildings properties of British firms, Messrs. Jardine Matheson, the Glen Line, and the Chartered Bank, slowly raising, or about to raise, their heads proudly skywards. I feel sure you will agree with me that, in these days of trade depression all over the world, and not least in China, it is a source of pride and satisfaction to realise that all these buildings are convincing proof of the power and solidity of British commerce.

"I do not forget that, in addition to and apart from the services rendered to British trade, the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank has been the poineer of financial service to the Chinese Government, of which it continues to be the most representative channel.

"The presence in our midst today of so many prominent and distinguished Chinese gentlemen testifies to their appreciation of this fact,

STRESSES CO-OPERATION

"Ladies and gentlemen, the greatest task before the world today is to cultivate friendship amongst nations. It is one of the few things really worth while. If we Britons, who should always remember that we are guests in this country, lived alongside our Chinese hosts on any terms but those of close friendship, we might well describe the situation as barbaric. Common sense, law, order, peace, every thing that is just and right, demands honor and fair dealing in our relations with the Chinese.

"After that, co-operation is the keystone of all successful enterprise in China.

"I have always had the greatest confidence in the future derived from co-operation of the Chinese and Anglo-Saxon races. Sharp as is the contrast between the energetic mentality of the Anglo-Saxon and the philosophic outlook of the Chinese, there is a strange likeness in the temperament of the two nations. It is still true that the Chinese merchant is as good as his bond and we may hope that both nations have this in common, that they believe in a square deal. The Chinese understand the Anglo-Saxon much better today than they did fifty, or even twenty, years ago, and the Anglo-Saxon is slowly but surely recognising the fine characteristics of the Chinese. My confidence in the future is encouraged by the spendid example given by so many British firms in Shanghai and elsewhere in China in bringing our respective nationals together and in their successful efforts to promote international societies which will cement the bonds which have happily so long existed between our two countries.

CLOSER TIES HOPED FOR

"We all hope that these bonds will grow closer in the general interest of world stability and world peace.

"Ladies and gentlemen, on us is laid the high destiny of being interpreters and mighty smiths—interpreters to our own people of the qualities of the Chinese and to the Chinese of the qualities of our own race, great qualities which each possess, however much they may be obscured occasionally in the eyes of the other by misunderstanding and misrepresentations—mighty smiths to forge the links of that mutual respect, confidence and understanding, which shall at last bind the nations together in co-operation, to serve the cause of peace, and to win renewed prosperity for mankind.

"With the laying of this stone the annals of the Bank enter upon a new era of continued usefulness in the sphere of co-operation, and of continued prosperity, we trust, to all those connected with it."

H'KONG GOVERNOR SPEAKS

At the conclusion of Sir Beilby Alston's speech, Sir Reginald Stubbs said that he felt it was impossible for the Governor of Hongkong to allow such an occasion to pass without a few words regarding an institution so important to Hongkong. The relations between the government of Hongkong and the bank had always been of the friendliest character, he said, and their association had been very intimate in the past, was so in the present and he hoped would continue always to be so. He referred to dealings with the bank in the past and said he wished to take this advantage of expressing his personal appreciation for assistance given on behalf of his government. He did not refer to financial assistance, though that had always been cordially extended when they were forced, like all other governments, to ask such assistance, but more especially to the advice which had always been at the government's disposal.

Sir Newton Stabb, the last chief manager, had been a member of the Executive Council and his sound judgment and readiness to help had impressed him most favorably. He had also been most fortunate in persuading Mr. Stephen to take a seat on the Council, while the list of directors of the bank contained two other names of members of the Legislative Council and that fact alone was significant of the connection between the bank and the government. Hongkong depended for its existence upon British trade in China and all know that British trade in China depended to a very large and increasing extent on the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank. In concluding he wished the bank continued prosperity and success.

Paris's Big Fashion Firms To Halt Copying Of Gowns

Smaller Dressmakers Face Court Actions For Plagiarism—Reward Of 1,000 Francs Offered For Proof Of Deliberate Theft

Paris, March 19.—American buyers of Paris gowns may find themselves named accomplices after the fact if the big fashion firms carry to an extreme their opposition to the smaller dressmakers copying their creations. So bitter is the fight between the creators, who charge tenfold the price that their lesser known competitors ask for the same gown, that one of the biggest Paris houses this week offered a reward of 1,000 francs to any one bringing proof that one of their robes was deliberately copied and promising to invoke a court decision as to whether plagiarism should not be punished just as severely when a gown is concerned as if it were a literary theft.

Meanwhile the smaller dressmaking firms who rely chiefly on an established clientele of French citizenry continue not to be alarmed by the threats of the richer houses. In fact some of the biggest dressmakers confess that their sales are steadily falling off, while the "unknowns" are all doing a thriving business. The reply of the latter, to the charge of plagiarism is that it is they and not the big Rue de la Paix houses who fix the fashions, these being merely a link in a vicious circle which originates with the popular clientele, is embellished by the renowned firms and generalised by public consumption through the cheaper houses and department stores.

Would Improve Manners At Imperial Garden Party

Jiji Takes Strongest Tone Among Japanese Papers —Points To Extenuating Circumstances In Fight For Cake

Tokio, April 23.—As an aftermath of the Cherry Blossom Party, held at the Imperial Gardens at Shinjuku Wednesday afternoon, a campaign was started in the Japanese press yesterday for the improvement of the manners of some Japanese of the upper classes. The Jiji takes the strongest tone among the journals which refer to ungentlemanly behaviour on the part of some of those who attended the party.

There are extenuating circumstances in the case of those highly placed gentlemen who not only helped themselves freely of the cake but took away more than they could eat, says the Jiji, since it was evident that in appropriating all the cake they could lay their hands on they were actuated by a desire to let their families and relatives share with them in the enjoyment of the Imperial gifts. But many of the papers find it impossible to explain the conduct of many who the moment they were seated at the table practically fought with each other to pocket all the cake they could.

The Jiji cites the case of some men, highly placed in the Government service, who attacked the sweets with such avidity and enthusiasm that the attendants had great difficulty in keeping the tables from being knocked over. The Jiji also tells of other men who, after having helped themselves freely, spread out large furoshiki, wrapped up what cake remained on the table and departed with apparent satisfaction with what they had done.

The papers report that the authorities of the Imperial Household, under whose direction the annual Imperial Garden Parties are given, are considering steps to prevent the repetition of such displays of bad manners for the sake of the good reputation of the nation.

$100,000 Against Want, But Alien Family Cant Enter

Illiterate Parents Went To Europe On Visit, Returning To Find Themselves Excluded

New York, March 12.—Her two-year-old son, Nicholas, American born, in her arms, Mrs. Eva Subich, the wife of Ivan Subich, tried to keep back the tears yesterday at Ellis Island. Beside her stood her husband and three older Croatianborn children.

The Subichs returned recently on the Celtic after an absence of a year. Although they lived here from 1913 to 1919, they are being excluded because of the literacy test.

In December, 1919, they made what they thought would be a short trip to Croatia, now Jugo-Slavia, their native country, to claim some property which had been left to Ivan by his family. Returning later than they expected, they found themselves facing laws non-existent when they first came here.

"Please tell them not to deport me. I would rather be thrown into the sea," cried Mrs. Subich yesterday. "And my Nicholas. I am sure to lose him."

Her husband explained that they had two other children born in the U.S. but that Nicholas was the only one left. "She is afraid that something will happen to him," he added.

The peculiar part about the Subichs is that they went to school in Croatia and could formerly read and write. "They've just forgotten it," a friend said.

But if neither of them can read or write much, Mrs. Subich has seven brothers and five sisters in this land of forty-word hurdles who can.

The brothers all live in Detroit. They have been in New York individually from twelve to eighteen years, have become prosperous citizens all of them, and possess real estate valued at more than $100,000, as they made affidavit to the Ellis Island officials. Their names are Steve, George, Jack, Matthew and Joseph. The five sisters are Katie, Mary, Barbara, Annie and Rose.

Last week John got this letter from the Red Cross:

"Subichs excluded because they intend to stay with friends and not with relatives. Because illiterate and likely to become a public charge.

"There is a chance of preventing deportation if you send affidavit by special delivery swearing that you are able and willing to support them and that Ivan Subich (Ivan is thirty-five) will be sent to school."

So the family got together. They pledged their $100,000 real estate and Rose sent her husband and the affidavit on. His name is Thomas Filkovitch, and Thomas has been at Ellis Island since Monday, when he filed an appeal. Thomas is a policeman in Detroit and, as Mrs. Filkovitch told him not to return without her brother, it would seem as if that city would be without the services of one cop for some time.

Told that there was no further hope at Ellis Island, Filkovitch left last night for Washington to see what Commissioner Davis could do.

"I can't go home. That's sure," he said.

Year Of Luxury Cost More Than 150 Of Education

Washington, March 17.—The people of the United States spent $6,000,000,000 more for luxuries in the single year of 1920 than for education during the entire history of the country.

This fact is brought out in a statement issued today by Education Commissioner Claxton. He points out that during 1920 luxury taxes were paid on expenditures totaling $22,000,000,000, as recently announced by the Department of Internal Revenue.

Dr. Claxton has assembled figures which show that during the past fifty years only $14,552,796,000 was expended on all institutions of learning. For the years preceding 1870 he estimates the total expenditures at $2,093,000,000, making a grand total of $16,645,000,000.

efforts on the part of one nation to secure any special privileges in China which abridge the rights of subjects or citizens of other friendly powers the United States Government could not doubt that the principle on which this view was based would be respected by the Japanese Government. That the American Government also felt confident that in face of the grave inadequacy of existing facilities for cable communications across the Pacific the Japanese Government would not desire to offer opposition to a project for supplementing these facilities by the development of radio-telegraphy.

TOKIO'S ANSWER

In answer to the above considerations the Japanese Government pointed out in the first place that in the letter of March 5, 1918, the Chinese Government did not create any exclusive right in favor of the Mitsui Company to do that which might otherwise have been simultaneously done by an indefinite number of parties each on their own account. It was obvious that wireless stations could not be multiplied as paying propositions. It was inconceivable that the successful operation of such an enterprise could be secured if a variety of competing stations were created by providing one for each "most favored nation," and what had been granted to the Mitsui Company was in the nature of a security in order to protect the enterprise itself from failure. The case should be distinguished from the establishment of a monopoly over an extensive area in interests such as mining rights which otherwise might be capable of enjoyment by several parties at the same time.

To cite one out of many cases analogous to the present it was a common practice in connection with a railroad loan to stipulate that no competing line should be constructed, which was a stipulation absolutely necessary if the railway were to pay its way and the loan be a success. Moreover the construction of means of communication within the territory of any country was purely a matter of domestic administration and the Government of each country ought to be competent to regulate all plans regarding such matters according to their own uncontrolled discretion. That was a matter which the Japanese Government understood that the United States Government clearly recognised in its treaty of 1858 with China.

GREAT NORTHERN CASE

In this connection the case of the Great Northern Telegraph Company, a Danish corporation, might be mentioned as a precedent. The Chinese Government had granted to this company up to the end of the year 1930 exclusive rights in connection with cable communication, etc, and the company had been exercising those rights. Not considering those rights to be of that species which spontaneously inure to every government and its citizens or subjects, entitled by treaty to most-favored nation treatment, the Japanese Government had duly recognised the position of the Great Northern Telegraph Company by concluding a special agreement with the Company as well as with the Chinese Government when some time ago they laid a cable between Nagasaki and Shanghai. The Japanese Government were not aware that the American Government had made any protest against the position which had been accorded to the Great Northern. They (the Japanese Government) understood that this acquiescence on the part of the American Government was due to the latter's sharing the Japanese Government's views of the character of the rights of the Danish Company.

It was, therefore, beyond the comprehension of the Japanese Government that the American Government should elect to protest only against the contract of the Mitsui Company whose position was the same as that of the Great Northern. The Japanese Government ventured to believe that from the above, the American Government would see that the question of the principle of equal opportunity and the open door could not with pertinence be brought into play in connection with. Government felt that there was no doubt that, so far as China was concerned, the inadequacy of the facilities of communication abroad would be removed should the Mitsui wireless station when completed enter into an agreement with the Great Northern for its use for such communication.

BLAME CHINESE

If however, the Chinese Government had been of opinion that the Mitsui station was not quite sufficient to meet China's needs for foreign communications then the (the Chinese Government) should in view of their agreement with the letter of March 5, 1918, supplementary to the Mitsui contract. As to the question of supplying the grave inadequacy of cable facilities across the Pacific the Japanese Mitsui Company have first approached the latter for their concurrence before they concluded the contract with the Federal Telegraph Company. The Japanese Government were, therefore, surprised to learn that the Chinese Government without taking any steps had entered into a provisional agreement with the Federal Telegraph Company for constructing great wireless stations. It was obviously impossible for the Japanese Government from the standpoint of protecting the acquired rights of a Japanese corporation to pass the matter without protest and they accordingly instructed Minister Obata to convey a warning to the Chinese Government.

With regard to the doubt expressed to a representative of the Japanese Foreign Office on March 4 as to why the letter of March 5, 1918 was withheld at the time the Mitsui contract was published in 1919 the Japanese Government stated it was not due to any hesitation on the part of the Japanese Government to publish the letter but was because the interests of the parties to a contract such as the present one did not always warrant the publication of all the documents appertaining thereto.

The Note from the Japanese Minister to the American Minister of February 16 maintained that the action of the Chinese Government constituted a violation of an existing understanding between the Chinese Ministry of the Navy and Mitsui and Company. That understanding formed an integral part of the contract which was concluded between the two parties on February 21, 1918, and in accordance with which the construction of a large wireless station for communication with Japan, America and Europe was now nearing completion at Shungchiao, a place between Peking and Tungchow. The Japanese Minister had lost no time in requesting the Chinese Government to have the arrangement with the American Company cancelled. Having received no reply, Mr Obata had sent a further Note to the Chinese Government, at the same time assuring the latter of the rapid progress that the construction work was making. The Japanese Minister stated that he would be grateful if the American Minister would bring these facts to the knowledge of his Government.

American Woman's Club Notes

The Literary Department will meet at 4:30 p.m. at the Royal Asiatic Hall, 20 Museum Road. Mrs. F. W. Van Buskirk will give a sketch of the Emperor Hui Tsung, who promoted art in the Sung dynasty. Mrs. F. H. Dunbar will read a paper upon Paintings of the Ming dynasty.

During the past week, various members of the Literary Department were privileged to visit two of the notable collections of Chinese art-objects in Shanghai, both visits were in the nature of a return engagement; the groups entertained however, being composed mainly of members of recent residence in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Abraham on Monday, May 2, exhibited their ancient bronzes, potteries, porcelains, and carvings in lacquer and semi-precious stones. The pottery and porcelain was arranged on tables in chronological order, conveniently for the host to explain the sequence of development from the early pottery of the Han to the acme of production in Kang Hsi porcelain.

Beautiful examples of Sky-blue after ruin, held the attention of all. The largest single collection is of the Sung white wares called Ting-yao and Tu-ting. These are of interesting and diversified designs, and purposes; some being ornamented with incised patterns, some moulded in relief, some with decorative bands.

An unusually numerous collection of Han and Tang objects from the tombs is of deep interest archaeologically. Spirited models of dogs, horses and camels come from the Tang, and several grotesque guardian spirits of the tombs, the faces of which render most Western gargoyles handsome by comparison; well calculated to frighten away wandering guileless spirits, if not human marauders. One guardian was particularly noteworthy, half animal, half human, because of the resemblance of the head to that of the Egyptian sphinx. The Han potteries are exceptionally good, showing several clay objects from the tombs; models of a rice pounder and mill; and of a cooking stove with holes for kettles, about which are conveniently provided a fish, a duck, a turtle, and other edibles. An unglazed hill censer, a variety seldom seen, is among these Han objects. A glazed pottery canteen, for use of soldiers, is an object of beauty, due to the unsurpassed brilliance of the iridescence, which is a feature of the Han glaze. The iridescence of this particular piece is so uniformly metallic that several of the visitors deemed it necessary to reinforce the assurance that the canteen was composed of pottery, by tests other than visual.

Early sacrificial bronzes of the Chou and Han dynasties were shown, of beautiful lines, encrusted with rich patina in varying shades of green and red.

Among the old carved lacquers a cabinet about 27 inches high was preeminent, for design and colors. The table of small carved jades, ivories and agates, merited prolonged study. The designing of the ivory carvings is of unusual delicacy and restraint, a few are lightly touched with pastel tints. Among the personal ornaments, one of especial interest showed the utilisation of a streak of gray in a white jade stone, to carve an adorably mischievous gray squirrel bent on mischief.

The second visit, was to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bulow-Ravens, Wednesday, May 4

In addition to the comprehensive collections of Bleus de Chine and blue and white porcelains, which were described in these columns, earlier in the season, these collectors have made notable accessions within the last few months. Among the acquisitions is a tall Tang wine-pot, which has a bird's head and beak, the decoration being in high colored enamels; a fine large blue and white New Year's jar: a placque of the rare variety called cafe-au-lait: a sang de boeuf vase of exceptional depth and richness of the ruby color, and some imperial pieces of famille verte.

Of more than local interest are the acquisitions in Han glazed pottery, domestic bowls, and a figure of a warrior. One bowl is dipper-shape, with a short handle moulded like a dragon's head, with open jaws, many fanged. The green glaze is visible, overspread with iridescence.

The chief prize, unique as far as available catalogues show, is the heroic pottery figure of a warrior in armor from a Han grave, sculptural in effect, presumably the guardian of a grave. The figure is powerfully modelled, the strong limbs and chest thrown into attitude of belligerent defiance. The face is decidedly unlike the Chinese cast of countenance, and is regarded as depicting one of the fierce barbarian Huns of the period. Over the warrior's head is drawn a tigerskin, the head of which rests above the forehead the skin being drawn back, and brought around over the ears and chin. Other tiger-heads cover the knees, and rest as epaulettes upon the shoulders. A dragon head protects the abdomen. A distinctly Roman influence is observed in the coat of armor, and in the heavy crest, projecting above the tiger's head. Greaves are upon the legs. The figure is poised so that it will stand alone. Colors traceable are spots of red and stripes of black indicating the pattern of the tiger skin, as it falls over the thighs and hips. Over all is the shimmering fish-scale iridescence. The whole effect of the figure is of confident strength and dignity. The observer recognizes the hand of a master in the sculptural modelling of this warrior; and sees in it another evidence of the high art standard of Chinese sculpture, reached in the Han period.

M. M. Wilbur.

About twenty-five members of the American Woman's Club Literary Department visited a choice collection of art objects early in the week at the home of Mr. R. D. Abraham. The collection is especially rich in hand bronzes of the Chow period, the earliest dynasty known in Chinese history. It also contains several specimens of glazed pottery from the Han Dynasty, which have acquired such a brilliant iridescence through age that they seem to be made of polished steel. One of the pieces served as a canteen in the Chinese army nearly two thousand years ago.

Precious jade amulets, thirty or forty pieces of heavy white porcelain from the Sung period, choice specimens of carved red lacquer, and tiny rouge pots richly ornamented were among the objects displayed. Visits to famous collections in the city have formed an important part of the Literary Department program during the past year.

Shanghai W.C.T.U. To Entertain At Tea

Members of the Shanghai branch of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will entertain tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Raven, 405 Avenue Joffre, at the end of Seymour road.

The program comprises an address by Dr. Luther Freeman, songs by Mr. Dingle, Mrs. Henman and Miss Mungall and a chorus and part-song by American School girls.

The entertainment has been arranged by a joint committee of American and British members and all interested in the temperance question are invited.

Tea will be served from 4 to 5 in the garden if the weather permits, or if raining, indoors.

Britain Will Erect £2,000,000 Shrine

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 4.—A model of the Empire War Memorial Shrine, to be erected at Westminster, was exhibited today at the offices of the Empire War Memorial League.

The cost of the shrine is estimated at £2,000,000, of which £500,000 has been subscribed. It is proposed to make up the rest by a 10-shilling fund, and to make a special appeal to women.

The shrine resembles a Cathedral, in the form of a Greek cross, measuring 300 feet each way, and will contain 78 chapels, which may be dedicated to various regiments.

BEAVER BOARD

FOR BETTER WALLS & CEILINGS

Solid Comfort, Hot or Cold

Within Beaver Board walls and ceilings there's solid comfort. The closely-meshed pure spruce fibre of this good lumber product resists heat, cold and sound better than lath and plaster or other wall building materials.

You don't have to depend on outside labor for building Beaver Board walls and ceilings. Beaver Board is quickly nailed to the studding of new buildings or partitions or directly over old cracked plaster and dingy wall paper.

Beaver Board has endless uses about the farm. It's just the thing to line your work shop and it's even better for the building of a beautiful new room in some waste space in the house.

In a new booklet, "Building More Comfort into the Farm Home," you'll find many suggestions. It's free, together with an actual piece of Beaver Board, if you ask us.

2 SHANGHAI MEN ARE WINNERS OF CHAMPIONS PRIZE

G. A. Marshgreen And T. W. Lee Find Themselves Holders Of The Lucky Ticket

When the pony Old Bill galloped home ahead of the field as winner of the Champion Sweepstakes on Wednesday afternoon he bore fortune to Mr. G. A. Marshgreen, overhead foreman of the municipal electrical department, and to Mr. T. W. Lee, customs examiner, for these two were holders of the ticket No. 13,889 which after the race had a cash value of $201,600. The identity of the winners was definitely ascertained yesterday after a number of conflicting reports had got into circulation.

Mr. Lee was the purchaser of the lucky ticket, which was one of eight held jointly by him and Mr. Marshgreen. He said last night that four of the eight tickets had been bought for him and added that when he bought the additional four his selection included the prize winner.

It was not until several hours after the race had been run that the two winners learned of their good fortune. They had attended the races Wednesday afternoon, but Mr. Lee said they both left the course before the Champions drawing. At dinner that night Mr. Fred Stormes brought the news that No. 13,889 had won the big prize.

"I guess we'll go home and start a chicken farm," was Mr. Lee's comment when he was asked what they intended to do with the big fund.

Second prize in the big sweepstakes is reported to have gone to a Chinese in Hankow. It was drawn on one of seventeen tickets purchased here by Mr. C. E. L. Ozorio, of the International Banking Corporation, and transmitted to friends in the Hankow branch of the institution. Only two of the tickets were taken by foreign members of the staff, the rest going to the Chinese compradore and some of his friends. A close friend of one of the bank's shroffs drew the lucky slip.

The third prize was won by a Chinese here.

150,000 Vols Sought For Louvain Library

Paris, March 19.—Assured that the initial work in the reconstruction of the Louvain library will be begun before summer Belgian officials here are trying to purchase 150,000 volumes chiefly by writers on theology, science, history and politics before the eighteenth century which since 1817 have been sheltered in an ancient building in the shadows of the Church of St. Sulpice.

The 500,000 works in the original Louvain library were all destroyed by German vandals, but American and Belgian friends have gathered together nearly 200,000 volumes. The Paris collection has long been known as "the Cardinal Library," having been founded by the wealthy Mme. Cardinal and her daughters to aid students then living about the St. Sulpice. They were succeeded by a still wealthier Polish librarian, who brought thousands of long hidden works from Eastern Europe. The library has the distinction of not containing a single volume which has not received the sanction of the Roman Catholic Church, while many of the volumes bear signed annotations by men who have risen high in the contemporaneous literature of France.

CHIH KEE INTERNATIONAL DISPENSARY OF WUHU A BRANCH.

Mr. ZUNG CHIH-SAN (鍾級三) of Chih Kee International Dispensary of Wuhu traded under our name "The International Dispensary" since 1916. Being interested in other kinds of business, he wished to mortgage the stock and furniture of the concern. Therefore, we, the International Dispensary of Shanghai, bought over the entire concern and have made the same one of our branches.

From this date forward, we shall collect all outstanding accounts, and business will be carried on as usual. But in regard to all debts incurred under the name of Chih Kee, Mr. ZUNG CHIH-SAN is responsible for liquidation. We are entirely irresponsible for letters of security, other seals and certificates issued by Chih Kee International Dispensary. Besides notifying the city magistrate and the merchant guild of Wuhu to this effect, we publish this announcement.

The International Dispensary, Ltd., of Shanghai.

ABC

OUR correspondent and stockholding bank in San Francisco has a history which goes back to the pioneer days of California. It is the successor of two old English banks, the Anglo-California and the London, Paris and American Bank, both pioneers in the exchange banking field. The Anglo and London Paris National Bank, successor to the two older banks, took a leading position on the West Coast and now enjoys the distinction of being the largest national bank in point of deposits in any city west of Chicago and St. Louis.

Hongkong Share Market

Messrs. Moxon and Taylor of Hongkong write as follows in their weekly share report dated Hongkong, April 29:

During the early part of the week our Market was rather unsteady owing to the uncertainty with regard to the Stamp Ordinance. However, as the Government apparently are prepared to more or less meet the views as expressed by the Chamber of Commerce, our market closes with a better feeling and rather more doing.

The proposed Stamp Ordinance appears likely to go through with a rise to 20 cents from 10 cents per $100 for transfers, but without any other conditions as to transfer, and a small stamp duty on a rising scale on all contract notes.

The Shanghai Market continues to improve gradually with a better demand all round for Cottons.

Rubber continues neglected.

Hongkong Banks:—Have eased off considerably, no doubt on account of the new issue coming on the Market in the immediate future, and have come to business at $815.

Cantons:—Are nominal at $440.

Unions:—Have been done at $265 and close with buyers at the rate.

Wharves:—Have declined to a buying rate of $97, but with few, if any shares offering at this price.

Hongkong Docks:—Rose to $215 but close quiet.

Hongkong Trams:—Are wanted at $12.

Deferred Indos:—Have buyers at $292 London Register, and $285 Hongkong Register.

China Sugars:—Are nominal at $240.

Cements:—After having been done as high as $15, and close with buyers at $14.60.

Hongkong Lands:—Have had a smart rise and close with buyers at $198 Cash.

Shanghai Docks:—Declined to Tls. 140 but close with buyers at Tls. 141.

Freight Market

Messrs. Wheelock and Company write as follows in their freight market report of yesterday:

The situation in our Outward Freight market is as follows:

TO UNITED KINGDOM AND CONTINENT

Since last writing the China Homeward Conference has reduced the rates of freight on groundnuts, seeds, peas, beans, oils and flour and these reductions have resulted in some enquiries in these commodities but, so far as we can learn at present, without leading to any settlements of any importance.

TO UNITED STATES VIA PACIFIC AND VIA PANAMA AND SUEZ

These berths continue in the same listless state as when last writing a fortnight ago and there is nothing fresh to report except that rates via the Canals are weak.

COASTWISE

This market continues quiet and there is no movement of any importance to report.

Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows in their exchange circular for week ending Wednesday, May 4:

Exchange:—The London price of Silver at 34⅞d. shows a rise of ⅛d. since our last circular. Our rate for T.T. on London remains at 3/3, with premium of 1d. to 1½d. offering in the open market; at the close there are signs of a demand for Gold remittances which may lead to weaker rates.

Our stocks of Silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 39,800,000, a decrease of Tls. 1,710,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $36,670,000, an increase of $970,000.

Estimated value in Taels Tls. 66,000,000 as against Tls. 63,300,000 held at this time last year.

Coal Market

JAPAN COAL

This market has continued quiet since last writing, and there is nothing of any special importance to report—a good number of the local Silk Filatures have resumed operations and with the advent of the new season's crop of cocoons in the near future we expect to see deliveries improve.

FUSHUN COAL

No change.

FUCHUNG ANTHRACITE COAL

There is a gradual increase in the demand locally and there have been some inquiries from Europe and America for this coal. Deliveries from the mines suffered a temporary interruption during the recent military trouble in Honan, but good stocks are available at Shanghai and Hankow. Prices remain firm.

KAIPING COAL

Although no new business has been put through, contract coal has been delivered regularly which has monopolised practically all the supply. Prices remain unchanged and stocks of the better grades are very small. The reopening of the silk filatures in the near future will create a bigger demand.

Sixty Years Of Usefulness

THE Mary Farnham School for Girls will celebrate its sixtieth birthday tomorrow. Owing to increased attendance—this is its record year, with 227 students enrolled—expansion is necessary. The institution needs an administration building and three or four dormitories and its faculty is taking advantage of the fact that the school can now show three score years of usefulness to make an appeal for funds. Not a large sum is wanted. The details will be found in our news pages. A sympathetic review of the school's remarkable history will be found below:

"Nobody believed that it would be good for women and girls to be educated, for it was said that they might read bad books, and in all probability, neglect their housework and their children. No one saw any use in their learning to read, though it was not very many years afterwards that a mother-in-law was heard to say that she did not know why it was that her daughter-in-law could even trim a lamp better than the one who could not read."—MARY E. COGDAL.

BY V. P. TING

TO a connoisseur of curios the oldest and rarest relic of the ancients is much more valuable than any beautiful article of fine workmanship; to an archaeologist a piece of broken bronze or iron means millions of dollars, if it is really a useful object for archaeological research; and to a lover of good books a few musty and worm-eaten sheets far excel a gilded morocco volume, in quality and contents, which has just found its way out of a press. So it is with schools.

Of all the schools in the world, it is not always the one which has the finest buildings that can claim to be the best in the true sense of the word. Nor is it the one which grows with spasmodic rapidity that can win the unanimous admiration of the community. It is, however, the school which neither magnifies its capacity by the aid of periodical placards nor boasts of its reputation by daily advertisements, but which wins the confidence of the public through a steady course of progress in its farreaching services to society by producing good pupils who have become leaders of various public enterprises that can be dubbed "the best school" in the true sense of the word. One of the schools of such a type is the Mary Farnham School of South Gate, Shanghai.

Perhaps a brief sketch of history appertaining to the birth and gradual development of the school in question would be of much interest to our readers.

It was somewhere about three score of years ago, when the then "Celestial Empire" had barely freed itself from the terrorism of the Taiping Rebellion or the so-called "riot of the long haired marauders" that there started a small boarding school for girls, under the supervision of the late Mrs. Farnham, wife of the late Rev. J. M. W. Farnham, D. D., which was the nucleus of the present Mary Farnham School, in the vicinity of the Great South Gate. The school premises then only consisted of a straw-thatched kitchen and the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Farnham which at once served as the dormitory and school-room for the pupils.

Several years after the opening of the school, Dr. Farnham was given the material of several old Chinese houses which was converted into the first small building of the school. Later on, it was considered necessary to have an unoccupied missionary residence also given over to the school for temporary use; but the same residence is still being occupied by the pupils now. Along with the two missionary girls' schools in Ningpo and Canton, this school ranked the third in China during its embryonic age.

Of course in the early days the Chinese people did not pay any attention to girls' schools, especially those under missionary influence. Hence it was necessary to offer all sorts of attractions ere the first batch of pupils could be persuaded to enter the supposedly horrible doors. This was probably due to the general belief amongst the people that the young girls who entered the school of missionaries had either their eyes drawn out by their hard-hearted teachers for medicinal use or were transported to America to be sold into slavery. However, along with the change of times and public opinion, the Mary Farnham School was marching on steadily and yet slowly towards various improvements and innovations.

In days gone by, some of the best pupils were children of refugees. Those refugees had arrived from distant places in the interior in consequence of the Taiping Rebellion. Having suffered no small losses in their hurried flight on the one hand and realising the kindness of foreign missionaries in ministering to their various needs on the other, they had found it not so hard to entrust their children into the care and direction of the foreign authorities of the school.

In the year 1865, the school had the opportunity of converting the first pupil to be a church-member, who became very active directly after her baptism; in the year 1869, twelve church-members were enlisted out of the total number of nineteen; and in the church statistics of 1894, it was indicated that seventy-three of the communicants were secured through the influence of the Mary Farnham School.

For a good many years the faculty of the school consisted of one missionary superintendent, who also undertook teaching works; one Chinese man teacher of Chinese Classics and History; and a few women assistant teachers who had themselves received their education in the school. At the very start the guardians of the pupils signed a written agreement, testifying their willingness to allow their daughters to stay in the school until they were married; but as years rolled on, that sort of practice was discarded.

August 4, 1896, was the red-letter day for the school in that it was the first time that the school was in a position to hold its regular commencement exercises and to award three of its daughters with diplomas printed on blue satin as graduates. However, English was not as yet taught to the pupils and all of their essays, addresses and songs were purely read, delivered and sung in Chinese. The English language was actually added to the curriculum in the year 1899 when it was taught only to those pupils who were willing to pay extra fees therefor. Nevertheless, it appeared as though the introduction of English was rather a shaky venture.

In 1906 Miss Posey opened a kindergarten department which was the second best of such schools in China, since the first one was the Foochow Normal School for Kindergarten Teachers.

As a result of the successful work done in connection with the Department of Chinese Classics and History under the able direction of two efficient Chinese teachers, the school was enabled to push forward its work in the English Department by making annual additions of English subjects to the curriculum.

In the autumn of 1917, the school witnessed the addition of the Middle School Department of which the first class will graduate in July of this year.

In 1919, in view of the general congestion which necessitated the erection of new buildings for the accommodation of new pupils, the alumnae volunteered to raise $13,000 for a new dormitory which is now completed and of which the fortunate occupants are the Middle School girls. The new campus whereon this dormitory stands is the gift of the Presbyterian Board of Missions.

Let it be borne in mind, however, that Mrs. Farnham was not only the founder of the school but also one of its pioneer teachers for a full period of twenty-four years. Hence, the honor of naming the school after her. When she and Dr. Farnham went to live in the northern district, the school was left in the charge of Mrs. J. N. B. Smith, and in 1892, Miss Mary E. Cogdal became its principal. Miss Elfrida Lindholm (now Mrs. A. Hudson) was also one of the pioneer teachers who came in 1895 and worked in the school for thirteen years. When she went to Ningpo in 1908, Miss M. D. Morton was transferred from that station to Shanghai to fill her (Miss Lindholm's) vacancy. Two years ago, the school was fortunate enough to secure Miss Elsie Eddy to help the Middle School Department.

In regard to the enrollment of pupils for this term, the high-water mark of 227 has been reached. Pupils have kept pouring into the school every term. On account of the general congestion, the principal has been forced to advise the new applicants to wait for the time when new buildings could be erected for their accommodation.

Since its birth, the school has turned out not a few leaders in various circles and it has been chiefly noted for its traditional rules of sobriety, frugality and simplicity. A glance at the old students' records indicates clearly that many have received B.A. and M.A. degrees at Columbia, Wellesley and other leading colleges and universities of the land of the Stars and Stripes, China's sister republic; that others have been married to prominent religionists, educators, merchants and politicians most of whom are returned students from America and Europe; that still others have either been serving the Y.W.C.A. or other religious, educational or social centers or have brought up good and lovely families, as a result of their amiability and prudence as model house wives; and that some of the oldest students have even had the blessedness of witnessing their daughters and grand-daughters either gaining entrance into their old school walls or receiving their much coveted diplomas at the periodical commencement exercises held in their spacious hall.

It is wonderful to know that such a humble school of just a few young refugees menaced by all sorts of conservative superstition, ignorant belief and actual danger sixty years ago could have progressed so steadily until now when it has a total number of 227 pupils. Those who know the early history of the Mary Farnham School at all know how hard it was for the school authorities to maintain such a school.

The school, now sixty years old, stands in need of funds with which to extend its usefulness and it is to be hoped that the Expansion Fund Campaign managers will reap the reward of their commendable efforts towards pushing forward the far-reaching services and enhancing the prestige of their alma mater, the oldest mission school for girls in Shanghai, and that the institution will live, grow and prosper year by year and send the spirit of Light and Truth into the length and breadth of the Republic of China.

Dancing Into Prison

Dancing is dubbed a mania when society gives itself up to the practise as it did just previous to the war. It has hardly, since the Middle Ages, been proved to be a mania in the pathological sense. But J. C. Segrue, Berlin correspondent of the London Daily News, gives an account of dancing in Thuringia that seems to revive the Middle Ages:

"It seems that, apart from the very old and bedridden, the whole population of the state spends its spare time dancing. Workmen get up early to dance before going to the factory; their wives neglect household duties!—to dance; mistress and maid, business man and clerk, dance together; and of course, children dance on their way to school.

"Social distinctions have disappeared and political groupings are forgotten in the common devotion of the population to the dance. It seems that the passage of a group of thirty young esthetes through Thuringia preaching a gospel of love and brotherhood, and proclaiming that the spirit of youth could only be retained, or regained, through the dance, was responsible for the movement. As they approached towns or villages, the leader of the esthetes—who discard the clothes of civilisation, the women wearing short, filmy skirts, the men shorts, knickers and vest, all of them sandals—would summon the population by a blast on his horn. The gospel of the dance was preached, and very soon the population was taking lessons.

"At Jena—the famous university town, home of Haeckel, and incidentally of that delightful Fraulein Schmidt, who wrote the letters to Mr. Anstruther—the Junker corps students insulted the esthetes in the public marketplace. 'You will be soon sorry you've insulted us,' said the leader of the sect. 'Come and dance, young men.'

"Before they left the town the corps' students were dancing gleefully with the school-children, the professors, the burgomaster and the other town officials, the maid-servants, the mistresses, workers and workers' wives, firemen and policemen. The greatest triumph of the dancing esthetes was, in fact, achieved at Jena, and just before they left for Bavaria they learned with delight that in the town jail warders and convicts, anxious to regain the spirit of youth, had started to dance. Alarmed at the news of dancing Thuringia, and suspecting Bolshevism in so strange a movement, the Bavarian Government ordered the arrest of the dancers as soon as they crossed the frontier. The esthetes laughed in the faces of the elderly judges, and, it is reported, 'danced their way singing into prison.'"

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE

To attempt any play of Shakespeare means criticism both favorable and otherwise. If it be Hamlet we look for the "dejected 'havior of the visage," "the suit of solemn black," "the trappings and the suits of woe." We watch carefully to see how he will receive the ghost, how he will treat Ophelia; how he will manage the "Players' Scene." There are as many different Hamlets as there are different players, and yet we look for the traditional business, the traditional make-up, the traditional renderings. Woe to the player who, like a Fechter, a Tree or a Martin Harvey, cries "I will have none of these things, I shall not copy, let me create." The play goer is conservative. What he saw Irving do thirty years ago, he would see Quartermaine do at the local Lyceum today. If the present day actor gives not a faithful reproduction of his predecessor, he fails to please—unless he is good—very, very good.

* * *

On Wednesday night the Waring Company produced Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice." It was a series of shocks to many of us, who had seen the play a number of times before. We looked in vain for an enfeebled Shylock, stoutting the stage only by the aid of a heavy staff. What we saw was a middle aged, virile man, with passion, hate, love, all being expressed in voice, expression and action. I felt the theater bewildered. Here was an actor—Charles Quartermaine—who despised convention; an actor who would create anew the Jew. His daughter was a maid of perhaps seventeen. Why should the father therefore be more than a man in the prime of life. "Away with tradition; I shall be young, I shall be vigorous, I shall still dominate the Rialto." That was probably the idea Charles Quartermaine had in his mind when he set out to portray "Shylock," and that conception explains most of what follows after.

From the start he was more robust in speech, and bearing, than any other shylock that I have seen. He spoke his lines confidently, and even in the most impassioned speeches nothing was lost by the audience. At times he did appear to rant. At times his actions were too broad—his falling to the floor; to the seat; upon Tubal; and again in Act. III., after the Court had given the judgment, all seemed a little overdone. There was something very fine in his agonised cry of "Jessica, Jessica" when he realised that he had lost his daughter, although, I prefer, the convincing dignity of Henry Irving, who, at this point of the play, knocked quietly upon the door of his house and waited—and no daughter came—but the curtain slowly fell.

But Quartermaine's "Shylock" was a wonderful portrayal, and will develop—for the actor is a young man—into a distinct addition to the gallery of notable "Shylocks."

* * *

Shakespeare is said to be particularly happy in the opening scenes of his play. He does not only introduce his readers to his characters, and set them at once unravelling a plot, but he creates an atmosphere with the first few lines. With Macbeth it is "So foul and fair a day I have not seen." "Foul and fair," the keynote to produce impressions required. His 'Hamlet' opens on a scene with words to forecast the ghost and his message. "The Merchant of Venice" begins with "In truth I know not why I am so sad." The Merchant already has an indefinable feeling that trouble is in store—and yet a moment afterwards it is Gratiano who joyously cries "Let me play the fool, with mirth and laughter let the wrinkles come."

The Waring Company opened the play in a characteristic manner. Originality in the make-up of Antonio; originality in the rendering of his lines—and very effective—and originality in the youthful boisterousness of the smaller parts like Salarino (Peter Cresswell), Salanio (Hamilton Edwards), Gratiano (James Jolly), gave the piece a good start. Both Wordley Hulse as the "Merchant" and James Jolly as "Gratiano" are to be commended upon their faithful portrayals.

The scenic effects proved to be charming pictures. In coloring, in lighting, in setting, and in detailed arrangement—and added to this costumes as beautiful as they were sometimes daring in color—they provided a scheme to delight the eye of an artist, and to make us wonder how a company could manage to travel with such a quantity of scenery and luggage.

* * *

If Quartermaine was creative with his Shylock; if originality was the keynote of the whole production; and if the settings were unique; the text of the play made one simply gasp. Waring did not scruple to jump from Act I to Act III if it suited the purpose; it meant nothing to him to take a couple of lines from one scene, weld them on to more lines in another part of the play, and so carry the action.

Those hundreds of children who will turn up to the matinee of the Merchant on Saturday can leave their nicely appointed text books behind, for to follow the course of the play, as presented here, from the book is well nigh impossible, especially if you are to enjoy the splendid playing. But the cuts and additions run perfectly smoothly, and an interesting story is the result.

The "Lorenzo" and "Jessica" were more conventional than most things in the play. Frank Vosper and Miss Edith Smith were quite acceptable in the parts. Miss May Hallett proved to be a sympathetic "Nerissa," "Lancelot Gobbo" and "Old Gobbo" had good exponents in Christian Morrow and Frank Vosper.

One of the very best things in the production was the scene in which Frederick Annerley appeared as the "Prince of Morocco," to choose the casket. I have never seen the episode better acted; I have certainly never heard the lines better delivered. There was only one flaw in the splendid effort and that is when "Morocco" took the scroll from the casket, and after reading it, crumbled it up and dropped it on the floor. It is a good stage effect, but the curtain came down with that parchment still on the floor instead of being replaced in the casket, for many more suitors were to come and try their luck with the golden, silver and leaden treasure troves.

Bassanio was played by H. B. Waring. The part calls for the sympathy of the audience. The actor got that with his voice, his elocution, his enthusiasm, and his undoubted ability, he could not help but succeed. Blank verse is no easy task to overcome. Waring can speak in numbers and "the numbers come." Knowing that the production of the "Merchant of Venice" was controlled and piloted by Mr. Waring, this is the fitting place to congratulate him upon both an original and daring conception of Shakespeare's famous comedy.

Again, I have left Miss Jeannette Sherwin to the last, and with intent. It is good to send my readers away with nothing but pleasant memories. Therefore the first shall be last. Miss Sherwin's Portia will be the first thought to materialise in your "cosmos" when "The Merchant" is mentioned.

She was delightfully feminine and charming in her scene with Nerissa. She was good in the court scene, although at times she allowed herself to make points by something that might almost approach over-emphasis; but then again she recovered all her appeal, when, once more habited in feminine attire, she played with Bassanio and capitulated to his love.

There are players and parts I have not mentioned, but one and all worked with a sincerity that will compel the Shanghai playgoer to remember for many a long day the Waring "Merchant of Venice" as a memorable production.

Flight Of The Golden Plover One Of Nature's Wonders

No account of the migratory birds of the North American Continent would be complete without reference to that most marvellous of all flights—the yearly round trip of the golden plover. This has been described by Wells W. Cooke, assistant biologist of the Biological Survey, as follows:

"Its most striking characteristics are a single flight of 2,400 miles—the longest known non-stop flight of any bird—and an elliptical migration route following different paths for the spring and the fall migration. In the first week of June the golden plover arrive at their breeding place on the 'barren grounds' above the Arctic Circle, far beyond the tree line. While the lakes are still icebound they build their shallow nests in the moss only a few inches above the frozen ground.

"As soon as the young are old enough to care for themselves fall migration is begun by a trip to the Labrador coast, where the plover fatten for several weeks on the abundant native fruits. Thence a short trip across the Gulf of St. Lawrence brings them to Nova Scotia, the starting point of their extraordinary ocean flight due south to the coast of South America, their objective point. In fair weather the birds fly past Bermuda without stopping, and many flocks do not pause at the first of the Antilles, but keep on to the larger islands and sometimes even to the mainland of South America, accomplishing the whole 2,400 miles without pause or rest.

NO IDEA OF TIMES

"How many days are occupied in the trip may never be known. Most migrants fly at night and rest in the day, or vice versa, but the plovers fly both night and day. After a short stop on the northern coast of South America they resume their journey and travel overland to the pampas of Argentina. Here they remain from September to March (the summer of the Southern Hemisphere), free from the domestic responsibilities of their Northern summer home. The native birds of Argentina are at the time engrossed in family cares, but no wayfarer from the North ever nests in the South.

"After six months' vacation here the plover starts back to the Arctic, but by an entirely different route. They cross northwestern South America and the Gulf of Mexico, reaching the United States along the coasts of Louisiana and Texas. Thence they move slowly up the Mississippi Valley and by early June are again at their nesting site on the Arctic coast. The round trip has taken the form on an enormous ellipse, with a minor axis of 2,000 miles and a major axis stretching 8,000 miles from Arctic America to Argentina.

"The golden plover of the Atlantic Ocean though often flying 2,400 miles continuously, could make intermediate stops if they so desired. Sometimes when storm driven they seek the nearest land, and not infrequently appear at Cape Cod and Long Island. Some flocks stop for longer or shorter periods at Bermuda and on the islands of the Lesser Antilles.

"To the golden plover of the Pacific, however, no such convenient harbors of safety are available. Their flight of aproximately equal length (2,000 miles) takes them across an islandless sea from Alaska to Hawaii. No matter what storms are encountered, when once they are started over the ocean they must continue to the end or perish.

"It seems incredible that any birds can lay a course so straight as to attain these small islands in midocean, 2,000 miles from the Aleutian Islands on the north, 2,000 miles from California on the east and 3,700 miles from Japan on the west. And yet year after year golden plover in considerable numbers fly in the fall from Alaska to Hawaii, spend the winter there, and next spring wing their way back again to nest in Alaska."

A Popular Hangman

One of Vienna's most respected citizens, writes the Vienna correspondent of The London Daily Mail, is Josef Lang, the "last imperial and royal executioner of Austria," a handsome and imposing old gentleman in his sixty-sixth year, who is still active deputy chief of the fire brigade in Simmering, the suburb in which he resides, and probably the most popular man in the district.

His volume of reminiscences, just published, and edited by Dr. Oscar Schalk, reveals him as a man of human and generous disposition. He has brought up fifteen children, of whom only two were his own. He became executioner at forty-five, having been successively carpenter, soldier, stoker and coffee-house keeper.

He is very proud of the fact that his longest execution took only 65 seconds, the shortest 45.

But the most interesting of his disclosures relate to women of all classes who sought interviews with him at which they often made determined amatory advances. Some were content to look into his eyes or touch his hand. Many craved a thread of silk which had formed part of a noose actually used by him. Superstition was their main incentive.

He was once, on going to the governor's house to report himself, as he was bound to do on arrival, introduced to an aristocratic "afternoon tea," for which he was always well dressed on professional duty, as "Hofmeister Lang." There was some consternation when his identity was discovered, but this soon gave place to a fever of curiosity, and women surrounded him for hours with a fusilade of questions—and stole his pocket handkerchief as a memento of the occasion.

Women offered him anything he liked to ask if he would enable them to be present at an execution. He could take a certain number of men as his assistants, giving in their names beforehand, but he never took even men who had not some genuine scientific ground for asking, and never women, though there were many women who were quite willing to act as his actual assistants.

He never had to execute a woman and was heartily glad of it.

If only for its sidelights on superstition this is a remarkable book. Lang's pre-war correspondence, much of which his wife often burned unopened consisted mainly of requests for locks of hair, his own or else from a "patient," and for all imaginable articles that had been touched by him or by a hanged murderer. And Lang himself is not without superstition. He always carries about with him a tiny skein containing a thread from each silk noose he has used to launch a man into eternity.

Woman And Love

Three men are necessary to every charming woman's education—one who teaches her to love, one who teaches her that she is lovable, and one who teaches her how to inspire love.

* * *

Every girl dreams of being loved madly, wildly, desperately by a man with enough plain, practical common sense to support a wife, keep up a motorcar and put the cuff links in his own shirts.

Strange Properties Of The Tourmaline

The crystal, tourmaline, is capable of attracting small bits of paper and straw in much the same way as amber. This attraction is, of course, due to an electrostatic charge.

When the crystal is exposed to sunlight of a low temperature it loses its electrical charge, but regains it upon being heated again. If it has a negative charge at first, it will have a positive charge when it is reheated.

Several other precious stones exhibit phenomena along this line, but tourmaline is the most interesting and spectacular of all.

Give Them Hair," Says King George, Of Guards' Chins

London, March 1.—British guardsmen are again growing mustaches. The change is due to a complaint by King George about the hairless faces of his household troops.

The army regulations permit clean shaving, but King George has declared that now that the guards have returned to their pre-war scarlet uniforms with bear skins, mustaches are necessary to give the manly touch that will complete the guardsman's military bearing.
